

Arms Program Forces Boost In Income Tax Rate in Britain

Head of Exchequer Maps Proposals in House of Commons
RAISE DUTY ON TEA
Government Stores Supplies in Preparation for War

London—(AP)—The British government jolted the nation today by boosting the income tax from 25 per cent to 27 1/2 per cent to help pay the costs of the staggering re-armament program.

Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, in his annual budget speech before a shocked house of commons, announced the income tax would be raised from 5 shillings in the pound to 5 shillings sixpence (from $1.25 to $1.37) in $5.

Presenting the budget bill for the 1938-39 fiscal year (beginning April 1), Sir John announced the government's total needs as $44,398,000 pounds ($71,721,990,000), an increase of $1,500,000 pounds ($2,400,000,000) over the previous year.

The chancellor also announced an increase in the duties on tea and oil. The higher tax on tea will reach into the pocket of virtually every family in the land, rich or poor. The higher income and oil taxes also will hit most of them.

Discloses Purchases
To an intent house he disclosed that the government already had bought "sufficient supplies of wheat, whole oil and sugar" to maintain civilian needs for the first few months if war broke out.

The government made the purchase secretly early this year, the chancellor told a cheering audience.

He said secrecy was necessary to prevent "prices being raised through knowledge that the government was coming into the market."

He declined to disclose the amount of stocks on hand or exactly how long it was estimated they would last.

But the announcement indicated the scale on which Britain is preparing for war.

Sir John disclosed that the government broke through red tape and did not even apply to parliament for "statutory authority" to purchase the supplies. He added that legislation authorizing the purchases and making supplementary appropriations for them would be introduced shortly.

Additional Fund
Sir John's budget figure of $44,398,000 pounds for the fiscal year (beginning April 1) did not include $9,000,000 pounds ($14,000,000,000) borrowed money already appropriated for re-armament.

Thus while the year's total national defense expenditure will be $43,250,000 pounds ($71,125,000,000) the amount included in the budget is only $33,250,000 pounds ($53,250,000,000).

Sir John announced new measures designed to halt tax dodging, dealing with "revocable trusts, settlements and one-man companies abroad."

He said he must provide 10,000,000 pounds ($16,000,000,000) for civil supplementary estimates, which will cover air raid precautions, purchase of food stocks "and other purposes where secrecy is less necessary."

The blow of the income tax boost was softened somewhat by an announcement of a special exemption by which 2,000,000 small taxpayers will escape the increase.

In the United Kingdom everyone who earns 150 pounds ($232,500) or more money a year pays income tax. But the tax will not be increased this year for single persons making up to 260 pounds ($406,000) or for married men with one child earning up to 400 pounds ($640,000).

Sir John warned that the "peak year of defense expenditure" would not be reached until next year and possibly the year after.

Daladier Rounds Out Cooperation Plan for Europe

Takes Firm Stand Against Including Reich in Four-Power Pact

Paris—(AP)—Premier Edouard Daladier put the final touches today to his plans for Anglo-French military and diplomatic cooperation intended to isolate Germany and thwart her dream of a middle European empire.

Two steps already had been taken to offset German annexation of Austria and presumed German support of Nazi demands for self-government for Germans in Czechoslovakia.

1. The joint Franco-British move to woo Italy from the Rome-Berlin axis by friendship pacts.

2. The understanding here that the British government has given up its plans to expand the friendly agreement with Italy into a four-power pact to include Germany.

The premier made known his flat opposition to any four-power pact that would include Germany. French officials said the foreign office "understood" British Prime Minister Chamberlain had abandoned that part of his plan when he saw France was determined to stand by her Czechoslovak ally and that Reichsfuehrer Hitler was equally determined to use such a pact to keep his hands free in eastern Europe.

These points, together with Franco-British cooperation in joint purchase of war materials, possible agreement in event of war, a more explicit statement from Prime Minister Chamberlain concerning support of Czechoslovak independence, the tripartite monetary accord with the United States and a general survey of such questions as Spain and recognition of Italian Ethiopia, were expected to be discussed when Daladier and his Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet visit London Wednesday and Thursday.

Burglars Ransack Store at Marion

Use Truck to Scal $1,200 Worth of Merchandise Last Night
Marion—Merchandise valued at $1,200 was stolen from the general store owned by Charles L. Bowers on Main street about 2 o'clock this morning. Sheriff Duncan Campbell of Waupaca county is investigating the theft. The loss is not covered by insurance.

It is believed the articles were loaded on a truck which had been parked in the alley at the rear of store as entrance was gained through the back door. Neighbors reported they heard strange noises about the time of the burglary. It is the third time the store has been burglarized in the last five years.

Among the articles taken were 20 ladies' dresses; 25 men's suits; 50 pairs of men's pants; 47 pairs of overalls; 105 pairs of men's socks; 15 pairs of shoes; 24 shirts and 12 cases of tobacco.

3 Escape Sharks In Jamaica Zone

Pan-American Flying Boat Forced Down at Sea; Passengers Removed

Kingston, Jamaica—(AP)—Three members of the crew of a twin-engine Pan-American flying boat had a narrow escape today, when the plane was forced down at sea yesterday some 30 miles from Jamaica.

Twelve passengers and one member of the crew were taken off the sinking plane by the passing steamer Caprina, but the commander and two others remained with their craft. However, tossed by the waves, it began to sink and the three hurriedly launched a collapsible boat.

As they were getting into it two sharks attacked, but missed the man and then began fighting each other. The collapsible boat failed and the men had to take to a rubber raft before they were picked up by the tug Killarig, which went out to try to tow the flying boat to port. The plane sank, however, an hour after coming down.

The flying boat was enroute from Santiago, Cuba, to Kingston when one engine failed in a rain storm. All passengers and crew reached Kingston uninjured and mail and baggage was saved by the Caprina.

Teddy Daniels Gets 14-Year Prison Term

Chicago—(AP)—Today Daniels, 16-year-old high school boy, was convicted of murder by a criminal court judge today and sentenced to 14 years imprisonment for fatally stabbing his mother in a quarrel over his truancy.

His father, who had stood by the boy's side as Judge Cornelius J. Harrington read the sentence, "Don't hold me, I'm all right," young Daniels said.

He stood bewildered for a moment, clasping his hands, until a lawyer suggested he take a chair.

The state charged Teddy stabbed his crippled mother with a kitchen knife in a fit of temper.

The boy professed inability to remember clearly just what had happened when he killed his mother.

Milwaukee Council Votes Parking Meters

Milwaukee—(AP)—The common council yesterday adopted legislation to install parking meters in Milwaukee, overriding an adverse committee recommendation and objections of Police Chief Joseph Kluchsky.

The ordinance provides the nickel-in-the-slot meters may be placed wherever the council decides, providing the alderman of that particular ward does not object.

Loomis Approves Loan To Wittenberg District

Madison—(AP)—Attorney General O. S. Loomis approved today a proposed loan of $15,000 from state trust funds to the joint school district of the village and town of Wittenberg in Shawano county. The money will be used for a gymnasium, two class rooms and two locker rooms in the present school building. Final action on the loan will be taken by the state land commission.

Japan and Italy Violated Pacts, House Is Told

State Department Airt Views to Foreign Affairs Committee

ANSWERS REQUEST FIGHT CONTINUES

Senator Norris to Vote Against Naval Expansion Measure

Washington—(AP)—The state department implied to the house foreign affairs committee today that it believed Italy and Japan had violated international treaties in operations against Ethiopia and China.

Chairman McNamara (D-Tenn.) read to the committee a letter from Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, which cited previous departmental expressions of its views on the observance of international obligations.

The letter was in response to a request for the department's opinion of a resolution by Representative Scott (D-Calif.) which asks the president to specify what nations in recent years have violated treaties to which they and the United States are signatories.

Welles said:

"Upon occasion during recent years when the government of the United States has believed that other nations which are parties to international treaties to which it is itself a party have failed or were failing to comply with the commitments arising under such treaties, this government has officially and publicly so stated."

Mentions 2 Powers
"In the summer and early autumn of 1935 when it appeared probable that an invasion of Ethiopia by Italian forces might occur, the government of the United States took occasion to remind both the Italian and Ethiopian governments of the provisions of the pact of Paris (Kellogg-Briand) pact and the obligations existing thereunder."

The statement issued by the secretary of state on Oct. 6, 1937, to the effect that "the government of the United States has been forced to the conclusion that the action of Japan in China... is contrary to the provisions of the nine power treaty of Feb. 2, 1922, regarding principles and policies to be followed in matters concerning China, and to those of the Kellogg-Briand pact of Aug. 27, 1928" is another instance."

After hearing the letter read, the committee voted unanimously to report the Scott resolution ad-

Alabama Elects Hill, Unopposed, to Senate

Montgomery, Ala.—(AP)—Although the name of Senator Lister Hill appeared alone on the ballot, the state went through the formality of a general election today to elect him to the senate seat vacated by Justice Hugo L. Black.

Hill, a former representative, won the Democratic nomination and immediately was appointed to the senate.

Democratic nomination in Alabama is tantamount to election.

Next Tuesday candidates for governor, congress, and many other important offices will be voted upon in the regular Democratic primary.

Guaranteed Wage Plan

Detroit—(AP)—The proposal of the Ford Brotherhood of America for the Ford Motor company establish a $1,500 minimum annual wage found little sympathy today in United Automobile Workers of America quarters. Richard T. Frankenstein, assistant president of the U. A. W., a CIO affiliate, said his union would not accept "so low an annual wage."

Yesterday Harry H. Bennett, personnel director of the Ford company, received the proposal with little enthusiasm.

In its proposal the Ford brotherhood, an independent union, had said that in return for a minimum wage guarantee its members would buy new cars from the company every two years from the company.

Bennett's reaction was expressed in the question: "Who is going to guarantee the company an annual market?"

Charges Two Party Leaders Demanded Fund "Kickback" From Architects

Philadelphia—(AP)—A charge that two Democratic party leaders demanded a million-dollar "kickback" for campaign purposes from architects on the state's huge building program entered Pennsylvania's Democratic primary row today on the heels of a federal inquiry into claims of "political coercion."

The latest charge came from Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, independent candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, who named the leaders as David L. Lawrence, Democratic state chairman, and Matthew H. McCloskey, head of the party's finance committee.

Margiotti, in a campaign address, asserted Lawrence and McCloskey directed the architects to "kick back" one-third of their 8 per cent commission, which the attorney general estimated would total $1,200,000.

The attorney general's statements followed closely an announcement

Says Hopkins Behind 'Chain Letter' Drive

New Yorker Accuses Him Of Inspiring Pump-Priming Propaganda

Anonymous Letter Tells of Attack on President's Program

Washington—(AP)—Sixteen of the nation's leading bankers, industrialists and insurance executives pledged themselves today to cooperate in President Roosevelt's campaign to promote recovery.

Washington—(AP)—Representative Taber (R-N.Y.) accused Harry L. Hopkins today of inspiring "chain letter propaganda" in favor of President Roosevelt's pump priming program.

Taber's statement to newsmen came while house members had before them an anonymous letter to President Roosevelt telling of "new propaganda about to be launched against your recovery program. A petition form was attached to the letter which the writer said originated in a large corporation in Detroit."

The New York congressman, in blaming the works progress administrator for pro-pumping-priming chain letters, said writers of a number of the communications he received had copied the "chain" instructions as well as the body of the letter, thus disclosing what he called their "propaganda" nature.

"On the bottom corners of some of the letters," Taber said, "was a line stating 'make one copy for your congressman and send this to four other persons.'"

The New Yorker said he also was getting a lot of "honest opinion" to the program.

Congressional consideration of the president's spending-lending program picked up speed when Secretary Ickes completed in two hours his outline for the house appropriation committee of the part the public works administration would play in the setup.

Committee members had expected questioning of the interior secretary to consume several days. They reserved the right, however, to recall him.

Representative Woodrum (D-Va.) said Ickes told the committee there were 2,714 projects on PWA's approved list which would take about

Spanish Insurgents In General Advance

Hendaye, France, at the Spanish Frontier—(AP)—The insurgents reported a general advance today along the coastal battlefield from Albocacer to Alcala de Chivert after "pulverizing" government defenses with artillery fire and aviation bombardment.

Dispatches said the insurgent offensive pushed toward Castellon de La Plana, important Mediterranean seaport 25 miles to the south, despite government counterattacks yesterday. Although exact details of the gains were not given, insurgent officers predicted "continued success."

The government, however, declared its counterattacks had broken the insurgent lines in the center of the Albocacer-Alcala de Chivert line and that insurgent troops had been driven back in disorder.

General Miguel Aranda's insurgent troops were said to have resumed the offensive after the government counterattacks.

Appeals Court Ruling On Milk License Order

Madison—(AP)—Fred M. Wylie, special counsel for the department of agriculture and markets, today appealed to the supreme court from Circuit Judge A. C. Hoppmann's decision revoking a departmental order denying a milk dealer's license to Louis Buhler of Racine.

In the brief filed with the court, Wylie said, "the department's order was set aside on technical grounds, and with a criticism of procedure of the department which if it is allowed to stand as a precedent and be the judicial rule, will defeat largely the legislative purpose for administrative bodies that can meet the practical needs of government."

Entire Suchow Region Evacuated, Jap Report

Shanghai—(AP)—Japanese, driving forward savagely only 12 miles from the east-west Lunghai railway, their objective in four months of fighting, reported today the entire Suchow area was being evacuated by Chinese civilians.

A Japanese army spokesman said aerial observation showed all roads in the sector choked with Chinese farmers carrying their belongings southward and a rapid Japanese advance upon Suchow, the strategic junction of the Lunghai and north-south Tientsin-Pukow railway.

At the same time a wide shake-up in the Japanese naval command in Chinese waters was announced.

Transferred to unidentified posts were Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, commander-in-chief of the third fleet in Chinese waters throughout the Shanghai operations; Rear Admiral Tadao Honda, former naval attaché to the Japanese embassy in China, who is used many of the navy's statements and explanations at the time of the sinking of the U. S. S. Panay, and commander of the special naval landing party in China. Their successors were not named.

Flanner Lauds WPA Activities In Badger State

Outlines Improvement in Public Properties Since Start

Madison—(AP)—P. D. Flanner, state WPA administrator, said today that works progress administration operations have produced a substantial extension and improvement of public properties and facilities in Wisconsin.

He summarized a report on file in Washington listing the physical accomplishments of WPA projects in Wisconsin from the beginning of the program through Oct. 1, 1937.

The report said the highway program included: Construction of 250 miles and improvement of more than 8,700 miles of roads; construction of 102 bridges and reconstruction of 65 others; construction of 2,674 culverts, 194 miles of curb or gutter, nearly 275,000 feet of roadside ditches, and 25,000 feet of pipeline.

WPA workmen, Flanner said, built 602 public buildings, including 14 schools, 115 recreational, 24 administrative, and 19 garage structures. An additional 935 buildings were modernized or otherwise improved.

Recreational Projects
Among outdoor recreational facilities completed by the WPA were 25 athletic fields, 14 playgrounds, 19 swimming and wading pools, three golf courses, 98 tennis courts, and 28 new parks. The report listed improvements in about 170 athletic fields and playgrounds and 162 parks.

Municipal water and sewerage system improvements to which the WPA contributed included 105 miles of water lines, 208 miles of sewer lines, construction of more than 4,000 manholes and catch basins, eight new sewage disposal plants and a garbage incinerator. Seven miles of water main and 60 miles of sewer were reconditioned.

Flanner said WPA non-construction projects also contributed materially to public welfare. He said more than 27,500,000 pounds of foodstuffs and 950,000 quarts of milk were distributed, over 800,000 hot lunches were served in schools, sewing room projects produced nearly 2,500,000 articles, and 1,500,000 school and library books were repaired.

Phil's Meeting of Midwest Liberals Sets Capital Agog

Observers Believe New National Third Party to Be Founded

BY JOHN W. WINGAARD
Madison—In a capital tense with expectancy and humming with speculation, Governor Philip F. LaFollette today continued working on plans for Thursday night's midwestern convention of his liberal friends which may be a turning point in his somewhat spectacular career.

Closed in his study at the governor's mansion the state's chief executive polished the speech which he will deliver at the old red gymnasium on the University of Wisconsin campus Thursday evening, and which politicians in Wisconsin and all over the country are awaiting as the signal to a probable formation of a new national political party, or at the least a fundamental realignment of middlewestern politicians.

Indicative of the interest which Wisconsin's young governor has aroused in national political circles with his recent radio criticism of the New Deal is the presence of numerous out-of-state newspapermen. When hardheaded editors of big newspapers in Chicago and New York and elsewhere assign their political reporters to Wisconsin's state capital, there is something stirring.

Lamont Witness In Whitney Quiz

Felt Under No Obligation To Report Misuse of Funds, He Says

Washington—(AP)—Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Company, told the securities commission today he felt no obligation to report the possible misuse of customers' securities to the New York Stock Exchange or to public authorities.

Lamont was a witness at the commission's examination of the failure of the New York brokerage house of Richard Whitney and Company.

Testifying in a crowded hearing room, Lamont said:

"Here was a question of a man in whom we had utmost confidence. He had made a terrible mistake. His brother was going to help him."

Explaining that he had "moved as my heart dictated," Lamont described his reactions after he loaned $1,082,000 to his partner, George Whitney, brother of the bankrupt brokerage house head.

"It never occurred to me that I should butt in and denounce Richard Whitney, nor that I should run to the stock exchange authorities when they have all the machinery in the world. I felt it should be taken care of in other ways and that it was not up to me."

Provides Modified Form Of Undistributed Profits Tax

DISPUTES ENDED

Harrison Says Bill Gives Relief to Business

Washington—(AP)—A joint conference committee completed work today on a compromise draft of conflicting senate and house tax revision bills.

With differences between the two bills composed, Chairman Harrison (D-Miss.) of the senate finance committee said the compromise measure "is the most forward step in years toward helping employment by private initiative through a fiscal policy of the federal government."

"The bill gives relief to business," Harrison added, "and should under normal business conditions increase receipts to the government."

The committee earlier had accepted a modified form of the undistributed profits tax and adopted principles of capital gains taxation.

Reject Borah Proposal
The group voted to accept house-approved provisions increasing the liquor gallonage tax from $2 to $2.25. It rejected a proposal by Senator Borah (R-Idaho) to make future issues of government securities taxable.

The Borah proposal was turned down, members of the conference committee said, because removal of tax exemptions will be considered separately in line with recommendations made yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt asked that tax exemptions be removed from both federal and state securities and salaries. Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, said that whether the senate would approve the president's recommendations was "in the realm of doubt."

The joint conference committee, appointed to reconcile differences between the senate and house tax measure, approved an amendment sponsored by Chairman William O. Douglas of the securities commission to ease taxes on utility holding companies which liquidate under provisions of the holding company act.

Senate Provisions

The provision would exempt from capital gains taxes stock transactions in connection with such liquidations.

The senate-approved provisions regarding gift and estate taxes—the same as those provided in existing law—were approved by the conference group. A one-third reduction in the tax on automobile tires and tubes voted in the senate was rejected.

Last week, the committee approved a modified version of the house-approved undistributed profits tax and accepted with slight change senate capital gains tax provisions.

Legislators, while generally favoring the president's objectives in withdrawing exemptions from government securities and salaries, disagreed over the question of whether they could be effected by mere legislation or whether a constitutional amendment would be necessary.

A plan similar to that outlined by the president was submitted to the senate by Senator Clark (D-Mo.) when the tax revision bill was under consideration and was voted down, 41 to 22. Administration followers, including Barkley, were among the opponents.

Doubts Final O. K.
Clark said today that Mr. Roosevelt's message might bring many senators around to supporting tax exemption legislation. Barkley, however, said the previous vote made a general charge of sentiment appear doubtful.

Senator Duffy (D-Wis.) endorsed the president's tax exemption recommendations. "The six-

British Plan to Buy Warplanes Creates Problem at Capital

Washington—(AP)—The administration faced a difficult choice today as the British air mission in the capital began an inspection leading to the probable purchase of hundreds of warplanes.

Informed observers said the alternatives were:

1. Permit the British to purchase all the warplanes they want and run the risk of creating a psychological situation such as existed in 1915 and 1916, when the United States was furnishing Britain and France with war materials.

2. Refuse to issue the necessary permits and conceivably lose millions of dollars of business for American merchants at a time when business is seeking a stimulus.

Another factor before the war department was a decision whether to permit the British to cut into the expansion program under which the airplane manufacturers are supplying new equipment for the American army air force or to make the British wait.

Defense Provided In British-Irish Friendship Pact

New Treaty Clears Way for Effective Military Cooperation

London.—The new treaty of friendship between Great Britain and Ireland clears the path toward an effective military cooperation.

It is likely that talks will begin almost immediately on the matter of defense, so that Ireland may be added to the circle of "friendly empires" around the British empire.

These conferences, it was said today, would be pointed toward establishment of Irish military forces, closely supervised and trained by British army, navy and air force experts.

The talks would be unofficial, personal conversations among military leaders.

The accord, which must be ratified by both parliaments, was signed yesterday at 10 Downing street, the signers headed by Prime Minister Chamberlain and Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, New York born and once a prisoner in a British jail.

The three-point agreement contains provisions for an end to trade barriers, settlement of old financial disagreements, and for permitting Ireland to be responsible for her own defense. Union of Ireland and Northern Ireland (Ulster) was not mentioned.

To Quit Ports

Principal point of the defense section was Britain's agreement to withdraw by Dec. 31 from the ports of Berehaven, Cobh and Lough Swilly, where she has maintained naval defense stations.

The details of giving to Ireland full sovereignty over defense of her shores, and at the same time working out the means of coordinating military of the two countries to the advantage of both, however, were not touched upon. The personal staff talks, which may continue for some time, would handle these.

The trade section of the pact provides that retaliatory duties growing from the trade war of the last six years shall be abolished; Ireland generally gains free access to British markets; certain British goods get preferential treatment in the Ireland market.

Ireland pays $50,000,000 cash to settle old land annuity payments which would have totalled about $750,000,000 if continued until 1980. The payments formerly were collected by the London government for former landlords who had sold their British holdings to peasants.

Continues Payments

Ireland will continue paying $1,250,000 annually on debts for property damaged during rebellions. The treaty is to run for three years, upon ratification by the parliaments.

The main, unsettled issue is the union of Ireland and Northern Ireland, opposed always by the six Ulster counties.

Irish government spokesmen, even though the point was not mentioned, saw in the pact a step toward an eventual, united all-Ireland nation.

The British parliament set up separate parliaments for the 26 counties of "southern Ireland" and for Northern Ireland in 1920.

Ulster accepted and named a parliament for her six counties on May 24, 1921. The rest of Ireland ignored the plan; a republic was proclaimed in 1919, but on Dec. 6, 1921, a treaty was signed with Britain.

Under this treaty, the southern counties became an Irish Free State, with the same status as the self-government dominions in the British commonwealth of nations.

Under a new constitution, the free state now is known as Ireland, or by the Gaelic, Eire.

400,000,000 of the proposed $1,000,000,000 fund for loans and grants. The Virginian said it was proposed to limit the interest-free type of loans to maturity of 40 years.

At the same time Representative Beiter (D-N. Y.) proposed that PWA be made a permanent branch of the interior department and that it be given new powers over the operation of publicly constructed projects.

Reads Anonymous Letter

While legislators were discussing the spending-lending program, Democratic Leader Rayburn of Texas read in the house yesterday an anonymous letter which he said President Roosevelt had received.

"I thought you (and Jim Farley)," the letter read, "might be interested in copies of the new propaganda about to be launched on members of congress against your recovery program."

This is being originated in a large corporation in Detroit, Mich., the same outfit that got out the chain telegrams stating that the henchmen in different states, many of which were signed by minor children, babes in arms, and even the

Desterilization Boosts Credit Basis by Issuing Currency to Replace Bonds

BY MORGAN BEATTY

Washington.—(AP)—Desterilization of gold has become a fact.

It has enabled the federal reserve banks to plank down a $1,400,000,000 roll at the coast's windows, all ready and waiting for reliable borrowers—if they want it.

Maybe you have wondered, as I did, whether that was a sort of sleight of hand trick, to produce nearly a billion and a half dollars where none was apparent before.

Fact is, sterilization and desterilization of gold is a trick. It's a gadget invented by the U. S. treasury and federal reserve system to meet some of the strange new money problems created by the 1929 depression.

That depression forced all nations of the world—including America—off the gold standard.

But gold standard or no gold standard, America still seemed the safest place in the world for money. A steady flow of money to America forced additional gold deposits into American vaults. And every bit of gold currency that arrived from abroad went into the U. S. treasury because the law says no private individual may own gold in America. Result: the treasury today has $12,000,000,000 worth—half the world's supply.

Now It's Sterilized

As gold arrived, the treasury paid for it by issuing currency. Each dollar's worth was good for a dollar bill. The bill, deposited in a federal reserve bank, became the base for added credit. For by law and custom banks may lend five, 10 or even 20 times their original deposits.

In other words, a million dollars in bank deposits might be the base for 20 millions in loans.

The availability of all that credit was fine while the depression was deep. But recovery set in. Demand for loans picked up.

The treasury got worried. What would happen, it wondered, if all that foreign gold should be withdrawn suddenly and all those loans had to be repaid at once? Wouldn't there be a panic?

So the experts sought a way to keep additional gold from becoming the basis for additional credit.

Sterilization was applied as the way out.

Thereafter, when foreign gold arrived at the treasury, no new currency was issued to pay for it. Instead, for $100 worth of gold, the treasury issued a $100 bond. This went back to the bank just as currency would, but ordinarily it did not become the basis for credit.

In a couple of years, the treasury had issued $1,400,000,000 of these bonds against "sterilized" gold. The credit base had not been increased.

Now It Isn't

All this was happening during 1935, 1936 and 1937 when banks were putting out more loans, businessmen were borrowing and things looked like a boom.

Then came the recession. Borrowing dropped off. Business slackened. When it had lasted until April this year, the administration thought it would be a good idea to invite business to borrow.

And so, desterilization.

In effect, the treasury took back the gold it had put in the banks and issued currency in their place. That currency, unlike the bonds, can be used as a credit base. The banks find themselves with a lot of loanable credits on hand. The idea is that they will be very glad to lend this money because otherwise it will be idle and profitless. With so much money available, businessmen should be tempted to borrow.

Whether it all works out remains to be seen. The treasury has led business to money; can it make it borrow?

What if the foreigner should ask for his gold? The answer of the experts is that there are so few loans out against the credit base now that it could absorb any shock right now.

Congressional Leaders are Divided on Advisability Of National Third Party

Washington.—(AP)—Governor Philip LaFollette's call for a meeting of liberals at Madison, Wis., Thursday night is exciting lively interest among legislators seeking to ascertain the potential strength of a national third party.

Although there is little expectation that a new party would have countrywide influence in this year's congressional elections, members of congress are divided over the question of whether the time is ripe for a political realignment.

Senator Norris (D-Nebr.) asserted today that third party advocates should hang back until it is determined whether President Roosevelt will seek another term.

"The president doesn't want a third term," Norris said, "but if a coalition of Democrats and Republicans in congress succeeds in blocking his measures, the people will insist that he run again."

"I think the formation of any third party should wait until we see whether we will have to run the president for another term."

Lauds Roosevelt

Representative O'Connell (D-Mont.) has contended that a Madison conference would offer an opportunity for liberals to pledge support to the president for a third term. He said that if Mr. Roosevelt was not renominated by the Democrats, it would be "very wise" for liberals to place him at the head of a new ticket.

Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) said the time is ripe for a new party. Such a trend has been developing for 20 years, he said, and a "realignment of the political parties is overdue."

O'Mahoney said a third party might wield influence in the 1940 elections, he asserted, that none could now predict what form a new organization might take.

A highly-placed Republican, who declined to be quoted by name, argued that the LaFollette meeting indicates a drift of Progressives away from the president.

Bob Won't Attend

He recalled Governor LaFollette's speeches criticizing administration recovery policies, an address by Senator Robert M. LaFollette (D-Wis.) opposing President Roosevelt's naval expansion bill, and the vote of most Wisconsin Progressives in the house against the government reorganization bill.

Senator LaFollette, who said congressional business would keep him from attending Thursday's meeting, supported the reorganization bill.

The Republican leader viewed the present LaFollette movement as pointed primarily toward establishment of a third party in the midwest. It does not indicate, he said, that any new party could command important strength nationally.

Senator Lundeen (F.L.-Minn.) declined to comment on the LaFollette meeting, but Senator Copeland (D-Ky.), who unsuccessfully sought the New York mayorship with the support of Republicans and conservative Democrats, asserted:

"There is no doubt that there will be a third party. There may be a fourth and a fifth party."

Senator Austin (R-Vt.) said: "It is too early to talk about a third party—the only coalition that is likely is one of liberal Democrats and Republicans who favor each other's candidates in order to get the best man for a job."

Camera Salon to Open Here May 2

Year's Best Pictures Will Be Shown at Lawrence Library

The United States Camera Salon, a display of 104 of the best photographs taken in this country during 1937, will be presented by the Appleton Camera club at Lawrence camera library from May 2 through May 6.

The exhibit, which drew more than 50,000 visitors during its New York showing, contains prints by such outstanding photographers as Cecil Beaton, Horace Bristol, Imogen Cunningham, Alfred Eisenstaedt, Robert Imandt, William Ritsche, Arthur Rothstein, Willard Van Dyke, and William F. Winter.

The best of last year's works, both amateur and professional, will be presented in the exhibit. The committee which selected the pictures was headed by Edward Steichen, Arnold Genthe, Arthur G. Ough, Paul Outerbridge, Dr. M. F. Ogah, Lejaren A. Hiller, Charles Sheeler, Will Connell, James Doolittle, and George Hurrell.

Motorist Bruised When Automobile Tips Over

Lyle G. Pfeiffer, 220 Cherry street, Green Bay, escaped with minor cuts and bruises when his car left County Trunk D between New London and Sugarbush about 7:30 last night and rolled over after breaking a road traffic sign and tearing up a piece of fence. The car was almost demolished according to County Motorcycle Officer Jack Frenz, who investigated. Pfeiffer lost control of the machine, Frenz was told.

German Club Members Present One-Act Play

"The Punished Fairy," a 1-act play, was given at a social gathering of Der Deutsche Verein, Appleton High school German club, last night at the home of Edna Murdock.

Miss Sophia Haase, club sponsor, gave a talk on the play, "William Tell," by Chiller, following the presentation.

Members of the cast were Esther Hallgren, Marie K. Johnson, Margaret Baumer as Runa; Ruth Gust as Gretta; and Junior Sager as Hans. The production was coached by Eunice Kaufman, Sansee Courtney and Ivis Boyer.

The committee for the party included Lavonne Reece, chairman, Florence Mielke and Cecelia Behrnt.

Nine new fiction books have been added to the Appleton Public library, according to Mrs. Nancy B. Thomas, librarian.

Recent non-fiction books which now are available at the library are: "Horse in Antiqua," by Adams; "Motor Boats," by Atkin; "The Story of Alaska," by Andrews; "Robbery By Mail," by Barrett; "Hear America Singing," by Barnes; "The Greenwood Hat," by Barrie; "Ubet," by Barrows; "History of the Business Man," by Beard; "Lost Atlantis," by Bramwell; "Carpenry and Joinery Work," by Burbank; "Shakespeare Rediscovered," by Chambrun; "In the Name of Common Sense," by Chappell; "Yellowstone National Park," by Chittenden; "Amateur Power Working Tools," by Collins; "Tonight at 8:30," by Coward; "Susan and God," by Crothers; "Light and the Years," by Crowell; "B. plenty of evidence for the belief that the leader of the Progressive party deliberately managed his actions of the last week with an eye to the theatrical effect. And he might smile contentedly today, for speculation on his course was all over the front pages of newspapers all over the country.

In capitol offices, meanwhile, experts argued two ways on what is to happen this week. One group maintains that the governor will run for office again, and if elected for a fourth term, entrust the management of the state government to subordinates while he assumes the leadership of a third party movement. Others—who were joined by some political leaders regarded as LaFollette intimates—predicted that he will retire from public office in Wisconsin after the Thursday session to take the helm of the new party with an eye to eventual White House occupancy.

Those who are paid to know—the dozen or so of capitol correspondents, augmented by others here on special assignments—frankly admitted being "stumped."

At the same time it appeared that the air in other fields of state politics is being cleared.

Want $50,000

Meeting in Milwaukee over the weekend coalition leaders adopted plans to raise a $50,000 war chest with which to persuade Republicans and Democrats to join in a fusion movement to unseat capitol Progressives in the fall elections; in another hotel in the state metropolis, Republican chieftains indicated that harmony will really prevail among the previously rival official committees of their state organization.

Coalition leaders today may view with some satisfaction Governor LaFollette's renunciation of his six-year alliance with the New Deal, for the friendliness of the LaFollette and the New Deal Democrats has been regarded as one of the principal obstacles to a successful Republican-Democratic coalition.

It is also significant in another light, for as one coalitionists observed yesterday, the Progressives this year will have to "paddle their own canoe." In 1936 it was pretty clear that New Deal Democrats would split tickets—or at least many of them did—to give President Roosevelt a thumping majority in Wisconsin and to send Governor LaFollette and his cohorts back into state office. The state Democratic ticket, it will be recalled, trailed a bad third in the last state election.

versely to the house and recommended that it be tabled.

On the senate side of the capitol today, Senator Norris (D-Nebr.), usually an ardent administration supporter, said he would vote against President Roosevelt's naval expansion bill.

Norris Position

Norris based part of his opposition to the navy bill on the possibility that "if we start to build a lot of battleships we may find by the time they are built that the battle ship is out of date as a weapon of naval warfare."

The veteran Nebraskan said he would not oppose some expansion in the navy's air force, but declared the proposed $1,156,000,000 bill for ships and planes together is "too big."

Norris said he thought the $550,000,000 annual naval appropriation bill passed earlier in the session had provided for an adequate navy and that further heavy expenditures might be wasteful.

Some time ago, Norris had said he favored a strong navy because "Japan is running amuck."

Ashe to Outline Aims Of New State Division

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison.—William F. Ashe, Kaukauna, will make public tomorrow an outline of the objectives of the new state department of commerce which he was recently chosen to head, he said Monday.

Meeting with the members of the department's board of directors today, Ashe had been preparing a statement of policy and an enumeration of the projects planned by the department since he was appointed about a month ago.

For the last few weeks he has been alternating between his capitol job and his duties as personnel director of the Thimbley Pulp and Paper company at Kaukauna. He reported Monday that he has nearly wound up his affairs in Kaukauna and that he will be at his capitol desk full-time beginning next week.

Valley Council Aims To Enroll Troops in New Budgeting Plan

Adoption of the troop budget plan by at least half of the troops of the valley council is the report that Walter Dixon, scout executive, and scouts in the council hope to give to John Triplett, New York, assistant national director of registration, Boy Scouts of America, who will discuss the plan here May 5.

Designed to simplify money problems of troop leaders, the plan calls for the collection of re-registration fees from scouts in small amounts over a period of several months.

The plan assures longer tenure for scouts, enabling them to pay for their re-registration fees on the "installment" plan rather than in a lump sum which youths often find difficult to pay.

The permanent fund set up under the plan makes it possible for troops to provide scouts with more literature and equip them with uniforms, community stripes, and other insignia which are incentives to scouting.

Triplett will discuss the plan before Appleton district scouts at a meeting Thursday, May 5, at the Conway hotel. A district steak fry is planned for that evening.

McLean Chief of Associated Press

Philadelphia Publisher Is Elected to Succeed Frank B. Noyes

New York.—(AP)—Robert McLean, president of the Philadelphia Bulletin, today was elected president of the Associated Press.

He succeeds Frank B. Noyes, president of the Washington Star, who retired yesterday after serving in that office for 38 years.

The board of directors elected W. H. Cowles of the Spokane Spokesman-Review first vice president, and Paul Patterson of the Baltimore Evening Sun second vice president.

The other officers, including the executive board, were reelected. McLean became a member of the Bulletin staff in 1913, after he was graduated from Princeton university with a bachelor of literature degree.

He worked in the news, circulation and advertising departments to become familiar with the entire operation of the paper.

McLean served with the United States army during the World war. He rose from a second lieutenant to major of artillery.

Upon the death of his father, the late William L. McLean, in 1931 he became president of the Bulletin. He has served as a director of the Associated Press since 1924.

For the last year he has been first vice president of the Associated Press.

Former President Noyes is the only survivor of the band of three men who organized the Associated Press at the turn of the century. He delivered his valedictory address yesterday at the annual A. P. luncheon, which was attended by 500 members.

Committee of 19 Is Organized to Join Cancer Fight

Mrs. F. J. Pfeifer Named President of New London Unit

New London — A committee of 19 was organized at Washington High school Saturday evening as the new London unit of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. The group elected officers and made plans for conducting an educational campaign and enlistment drive during the next two weeks.

Mrs. F. J. Pfeifer is president, Mrs. Carrie Hooper, secretary; Mrs. Charles Chegg, treasurer and Mrs. F. J. Murphy, publicity chairman. Members of the committee are Miss Loretta Rice, Mrs. James Lockyear, Mrs. R. R. Holliday, Mrs. Louis Schmalenberg, Mrs. George Deming, Mrs. Harvey Greenlaw, Mrs. A. C. Borchard, Mrs. J. W. Monck, Mrs. Earl Meiklejohn, Mrs. D. B. Egan, Mrs. Martin Abraham, Mrs. C. D. Feathers, Mrs. Gilbert Fostad, Miss Edna Kunz and Miss Katherine Wilson.

The group will sponsor a public card party at the American Legion clubhouse at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening to raise funds for the educational campaign in the city. The enlistment drive for the national fund will begin May 1. Conducted similar to other national programs, 70 per cent of the subscription funds will be returned to the state for dissemination through the county and city agencies.

Will Arrange Talks
Starting this week the New London committee will arrange for local doctors to address all clubs and organizations during the next two weeks on the seriousness of the disease, the possibilities of prevention, and the importance of the campaign now underway.

About 125 persons heard Dr. R. C. Cantwell of Shawano at an illustrated lecture on cancer at Washington High school last night. While the cause of cancer is unknown to medical science, means are available to cure the disease and growth is retarded early, similar to the process of prevention for tuberculosis. Compared to tuberculosis, long considered the national scourge, cancer has doubled the number of its victims while tuberculosis has decreased two-thirds. Cancer today is as prevalent and serious as tuberculosis was 20 years ago.

Knapstein Says Brewers Against Excess Drinking

Outlines Social Responsibility of Industry at Rotary Meeting

New London — The social responsibility of the brewing industry to the American public was stressed by M. W. Knapstein of the Knapstein Brewing company in a talk on the industry before the New London Rotary club at the Elwood hotel yesterday noon.

The industry has long recognized this responsibility, according to Mr. Knapstein, and last year the United Brewers Industrial Foundation was formed for a 2-fold purpose, to interpret the public interest to the brewers and to interpret the industry to the public.

Excesses in drinking are never encouraged by the brewing industry, the speaker declared, pointing to the latest national advertising campaign which openly preaches moderation and sobriety. A code of practice adopted by the Brewers Foundation provides for high technical, civic and moral standards in the manufacture and sale of beer and ale.

Tells History
The speaker dwelt on the early history of beer and the effects of prohibition which this beverage was outlawed in America for 13 years. Statistics were offered showing the consumption of materials and grains, the huge sums paid to the government in taxes, the increase in employment and wages, and the increased business to related industries.

Beer, he said, is at least 6,000 years old. It was used for centuries in early Europe, under different names. The first record of the brew in America is found in the writings of the Pilgrims. During the early life of the colonies the manufacture and consumption of beer was encouraged, in some cases being totally exempt from taxes.

New Uniforms Arrive For High Life Squad

New London — New uniforms for the Miller High Life baseball team arrived yesterday. The New London squad has been handicapped for practice by the cold and rainy weather but players are scheduled to work out at the city ball park early this evening. New London's first game in the Northern State league is scheduled at Manitowish May 8.

L. J. Polaski, who is managing the team, spent the weekend at Milwaukee negotiating for players but was unsuccessful. The club is allowed four outside players, has contracted two in Munich of Weyauwega and VandeWalle of Nichols, but there is still room in the club for two good men.

Little Damage Caused By Blaze in Basement

New London — A blaze in the basement of the Ralph Euclow home at 22 W. Pine street caused slight damage about 7:50 yesterday morning. A pile of clothing next to a kerosene stove caught fire, resulting in a call to the fire department. Some damage was done to the stove and the basement ceiling.

Reorganization Bill Beaten to Destroy Prestige of Roosevelt, Boyle Charges

New London — Charges of paid propaganda and lack of full information on the reorganization bill prior to its recent defeat by congress were hurled at the general press by John J. Boyle, United States attorney with the department of justice at Madison, in an address before a banquet rally of Waupaca county Democrats at the American Legion clubhouse last night.

The speaker declared the bill was fought by a privileged few only to destroy the prestige of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and the confidence of the American public in their leader. The bill raised no political issue, he pointed out, and gave no basis for the fears of dictatorship as spread by the press. The bill, he explained, was to allow the president to find out where and how the money appropriated by congress is spent and to reduce the number of government bureaus for the sake of economy.

The same charges made by today's press against the New Deal were offered at the introduction of other notable legislation, in the history of the country, the speaker said. When parcel post was proposed the government among other things was charged with entering into commercial business, he pointed out.

New London Society

New London — Special music entertained the Women's Study club at the home of Mrs. Beatrice Monsted yesterday afternoon. Mrs. D. N. Stacy and Mrs. C. J. Fellenz played two piano duets, "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" by Liszt and "Invitation to the Dance" by Weber. Music festival contest selections were provided by the Washington High school string quintet consisting of Wilma Dodge, Polley Hartquist, Gertrude Pletetz, Jane Huebner and Henry McDaniel.

Leon Jack Hall was surprised at a party on his fifth birthday anniversary Saturday afternoon. There were 14 little guests present: Viola Mae, Rodney and Raymond Taubel, Janus Schellin, June Holloway, Donna Mae and Arlyne Bellie, Jimmy Thomas, Kenneth Gorman, Denis Gorman, Tommy and Darrell Taubel and Lorraine and Harold Hall. A 5:30 supper was served.

Installation of officers is planned at the meeting of the Women's Catholic Order of Foresters at the parish hall this evening. Mrs. L. J. Polaski and Mrs. David Nader are on the hostess committee.

New London Girls May Form Football Team

New London — Organization of a girls' city softball team will be sought at a try-out practice at the city ball park Thursday evening, according to members of last year's Bumps Bowlby team. The group is seeking eligible girl players from the vicinity around New London and will consider aspirants until 5:30 Thursday evening. The club has not decided yet on a manager for this season's activities.

Of Auto Manufacturers
Detroit — (P) — Representative Gardner R. Withrow (P-Wis.) told the National Automobile Dealers' association convention here this afternoon that "almost 25 per cent of the nation's automobile retail dealers pass out of existence annually" due to policies followed by automobile manufacturers.

"The plight of the railroads," Congressman Withrow said, "provides a striking parallel as to what may happen in the automobile industry should it disregard its obligation to operate along sound, constructive lines."

Congressman Withrow was co-author of a resolution in Congress calling for an investigation of automobile manufacturer-dealer relationships by the federal trade commission. The investigation is pending.

Mild Temperature Returns; 66 Today

Cloudy and Warmer Is Prediction for Appleton and Vicinity

Gloomy April turned her attention from rain and chilly weather today, at least temporarily, and smiled warmly on Appleton and vicinity.

The thermometer rose steadily and at noon the instrument atop the Post-Crescent building registered 66 degrees, well above the average noon readings that have been taken during the last week.

Cloudy skies but continued mild temperatures are predicted for Wisconsin by the Milwaukee weather bureau today. Showers are expected in the north portion of the state and the south section tomorrow, the Milwaukee report stated.

For the 24-hour period ending at 9 o'clock this morning, the highest mark in Appleton was 57 and the lowest, at 11 o'clock last night, 45.

According to charts at the Wisconsin State weather company plant, during the period, 18 on an inch of rain fell.

Buying of Steel Expected to Stay At Present Level

Steel buying shows no indication of gaining in volume, says Steel Institute. Prospects are for a continuation of the present rate of activity. Some observers believe the peak for first half has been reached, the early part of April being the highest point in production.

While inventories of steel consumers have been reduced materially, some having cleared their accumulations, a survey by sellers reveals that stocks are still large in the case of others. Continued absence of the various branches of the automotive industry from the market removes an important factor in demand and signs indicate little buying will be done for that outlet before mid-year. Agricultural implement manufacturers are approaching the time when production will be eased. Last year the absence of dealer stocks minimized this dip but this year stocks are much larger.

Important to Mills

Much interest attaches to disposition of the 16 cargo ships for which the maritime commission will open bids early in May. This tonnage will be of importance to mills with in reach of tide water.

Slight changes in operations last week resulted in a net gain of half a point in the national rate, to 32.5 per cent. Adjustments to meet demand indicated no definite trend.

Pittsburgh was 1 point lower at 29 per cent, New England was 1 point lower at 29 per cent, New England 5 points lower at 25 per cent and St. Louis 6.1 points lower at 36.3 per cent. Chicago gained half a point to 30.5 per cent, Wheeling 13 points to 44, Buffalo 2 points to 30, Cincinnati 27 points to 45 and Cleveland 7.8 points to 30.8 per cent. There was no change in the rate for the week.

Birmingham 66, Youngstown 31 and Eastern Pennsylvania at 28.

Reduced Price

International Tin Plate association, the tin plate cartel, has reduced the price for export business from the equivalent of about $5.62 per base box to $5.04 per base box. This is a reduction of 573 cents per box. The cut is said to have been made to meet competition by an American tin plate producer, selling under the former cartel price.

Meanwhile American tin plate makers have met severe competition in South American markets from German plate offered considerably under the American product.

Inquiry for 5,000 freight cars by the Southern Railway, requiring an estimated 80,850 tons of steel, is a high light in the railroad field. Bids will be opened April 30, thus offering possible early production. General Chemical Co., New York, is asking bids on seven to ten 70-ton covered hopper and Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. on one tank car.

The Chilean State Railway has awarded seven locomotives to Baldwin Locomotive works. Rail inquiry is being held back, although considerable tonnage seems imminent and badly needed. New York Central has postponed indefinitely rail buying program of 40,000 tons. Rail mills are nearing the end of present commitments, some closing the end of their orders early in May. Lehigh Valley has permission to borrow $78,000 for repairs to equipment, including 1460 steel coal cars. Government loans to railroads may increase equipment buying, though present freight volume does not require more than present equipment.

Public Projects
Public projects furnish most structural tonnage, among large awards last week being 7,000 tons for a trestle and 1,200 tons for traveling cranes for Coulee Dam, 4,500 tons for East River tunnel, New York and 2,100 tons for an airplane motive industry brought a smaller hangar in New York state. Some 7,000 tons are pending for Queens-Midtown tunnel, New York.

Labor interruptions in the auto production of automobiles last week, the total being 60,553 units, compared with 62,021 the preceding week. General Motors production was 23,370 against 23,620 the week before. Chrysler 13,559 against 13,775; Ford 16,085 against 16,135 and others 7,558 against 8,491.

Further adjustment in scrap prices in Eastern Pennsylvania caused the composite for steelmaking grades to decline 17 cents further, to $12. While the situation is weak and nominal in practically all consuming centers an occasional advance is made when important buying is done. This indicates the decline is near the bottom and that tonnage buying would cause an upward movement. The iron and steel composite is 1 cent lower, at $38.58 and the finished steel composite is steady at $61.70.

Chemist Confers With Officials on Paving

Walter H. Flood, Chicago chemical engineer, conferred with Appleton officials today on the College avenue resurfacing project. Samples of the paving were being taken from the street this afternoon and will be tested by Flood in his Chicago testing laboratories.

It Is Said--

That Shocion's good-natured Mayor "Barb" Alexander is sporting a genuine, streamlined, Greek nose instead of the slightly Roman proboscis with which he was born and with which he lived until March 19, caucus night. The whole thing started when "Barb" attempting to break up a slugging match between several enthusiastic voters and received a painful crack on the nose which made necessary medical attention and prolonged treatments. The sawbones did a neat job and now, it is said, "Barb" can give beautiful Bob Taylor, ace and spades and beat him, hands down.

PART OF PARADE AT SEYMOUR MUSIC FESTIVAL

No awards were made, the judges merely making suggestions for improvement of the various concert groups and soloists.

Louis to Meet Herr Max June 22 in N. Y. Ring

New York — (P) — Joe Louis will defend his heavyweight championship against Max Schmeling in the Yankee stadium Wednesday night, June 22, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today.

Jacobs' announcement merely confirmed the well-founded impression that the match would be held in New York. Chicago, Detroit and Philadelphia all had been mentioned as possible sites.

Four Arterial Jumpers Each Fined $5, Costs

Four motorists pleaded guilty of failing to stop at arterials and each was fined $5 and costs by Judge Thomas H. Ryan in municipal court yesterday afternoon. The motorists were arrested by county police.

They are Joe Reynebeau, Little Chute, who was arrested Thursday at Little Chute; Claude Sherman, route 5, Freedom, who was arrested in the town of Freedom; and R. Newhouse, route 2, Kaukauna, who was arrested in the town of Freedom Saturday.

Nurses Attend Meeting Of Sanatorium Officials

Mrs. Alice Sabin, field nurse for the Riverview sanatorium, Miss Thelma Burke, who is working with the county health committee, and Miss Ellen Standing, medical social worker for the local anti-tuberculosis association, attended a meeting of the Wisconsin Sanatorium Superintendents association at the Willowbrook sanatorium, Kenosha, yesterday. Among the subjects discussed were surgery in tuberculosis, sanatorium social service work and plans for the Tri-State Hospital association program.

In 1936 by narrow margins, according to reports received here. Republicans and Democrats are making their own arrangements for fusion without consultation with or help from the state coalition group.

Close observers at the convention of the Wisconsin County Boards association last week detected a trend away from the demands for more and more federal and state public welfare money which were so prevalent in the last few previous years. Perhaps reflecting a reversal of local public opinion, county fathers indicated a determination to pare down expenses and tighten up the distribution of funds to make them last longer and go farther.

Thomas Duncan, the governor's executive secretary, now on leave of absence, continues on the executive office payroll at $400 a month.

Princeton, Yale Asking Hitler for 'Non-Aryan' Books

Princeton, N. J. — (P) — A movement to add libraries of this nation's volumes in Vienna's National library that Hitler would burn because they are "non-Aryan" started today at Princeton and Yale universities.

In half-sarcastic vein, Editor James McC. Clarke of the Daily Princetonian had sent a cablegram to Hitler asking the German chancellor to give to the university library books he intended to "purge."

Coincidentally, Gaspard D. A. Bellin, chairman of the Yale Daily News, sent telegrams to the Daily Princetonian and to Harvard Crimson editors seeking their cooperation in a drive to get the volumes for the "big three" university libraries. Harvard editors acknowledged receipt of the appeal but withheld comment.

Rooney was one of the standouts on the Badger basketball team for three years and was elected honorary co-captain at the close of this season. He is president of the senior class at the university, and a member of Men's Union, university cooperative boards, Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, and Iron Cross, senior men's honorary.

Ten directors will be elected by mail vote of the association's membership. The term of office is two years. Those elected will be announced at the annual meeting during graduation exercises in June.

Favors Committee to Plan New Courthouse

Alfred S. Bradford, president of the Outagamie County Bar association suggested naming of a committee to study means and make plans for construction of a new courthouse at a meeting of the county executive committee yesterday at the courthouse. Bradford will meet later with the committee on the matter and also is expected to appear before the county board at the May session which opens next Tuesday.

The committee disallowed a claim of Water Willow, Kaukauna, for $3,869.20 for time spent at Waupun. Willer had been sentenced to the state prison and was later released when it was found that he could not be sentenced to the state prison in the lower branch of municipal court.

Award Murphy Contract For Furnishing Stone

Robert M. Murphy was awarded a contract for furnishing the county highway department 400 yards of keystone at $14.00 per yard in the bin with 6 cents per mile for hauling by the county highway committee yesterday at the courthouse.

Bids for culverts were rejected and plans for giving the contract to one dealer with commissions to be divided among the others in the county were discussed.

Princeton, Yale Asking Hitler for 'Non-Aryan' Books

Princeton, N. J. — (P) — A movement to add libraries of this nation's volumes in Vienna's National library that Hitler would burn because they are "non-Aryan" started today at Princeton and Yale universities.

In half-sarcastic vein, Editor James McC. Clarke of the Daily Princetonian had sent a cablegram to Hitler asking the German chancellor to give to the university library books he intended to "purge."

Coincidentally, Gaspard D. A. Bellin, chairman of the Yale Daily News, sent telegrams to the Daily Princetonian and to Harvard Crimson editors seeking their cooperation in a drive to get the volumes for the "big three" university libraries. Harvard editors acknowledged receipt of the appeal but withheld comment.

There are few of mankind's virtues which are extolled as gloriously as sportsmanship. The ordinary feats of sportsmanship are often times quite simple and can hardly compare favorably with those set forth by our past and present writers. Nevertheless, these simple deeds have an appeal all their own and have the power to gladden the hearts of both the giver and the receiver of the action.

TAXING OFFICEHOLDERS AND PUBLIC SECURITIES

The President will find strong support for his purpose of extending the income tax to state and federal employees as well as the interest bearing obligations issued by various governmental agencies.

But he is likely to find opposition to his method of dealing with the situation. Indeed, a great share of the country supports Mr. Roosevelt's purposes and deplores his plans and methods.

It so happens that for well over a hundred years the relations of state and nation in this country have been settled, the settlement springing from early decisions of the supreme court made at a time when that court found among its members men who had helped write the constitution itself.

There is plentiful proof from every point of the compass that the supreme court decisions of those early days were right. The Court merely construed the constitution by reading the entire instrument and concluding that although the nation included all the states it could not take a step, except as it found the right to take it in precise language of the constitution, that might trespass upon the states, infringe upon their sovereignty, or make difficult their independence.

That decision, adhered to on countless occasions since, is the basis of the present difficulty concerning taxation.

What is the best policy to follow in order to alter the situation, at least as respects taxation? Is it wise to ask the court to change this long line of decisions upon the say-so of the President or an appearance of popular will? If the supreme court arrogates to itself the right to alter the constitution and its legitimate construction where may we expect to stop? What is the difference between this sort of an alteration and "the suspension" of the constitution by numerous countries where suspension was merely a prelude to destruction?

If the congress of the United States will pass a resolution specifically making this taxation principle an exception to the general rule concerning the rights of national and state it may be readily submitted to the people for vote at the November election. In this manner, in fact, the matter may be decided quicker than by an act of congress which will take longer to submit to the supreme court for final decision.

At the same time we will have proceeded upon the absolutely right road. We will have taken another step to preserve our constitution whereas the policy advocated by Mr. Roosevelt is naturally one to weaken the constitution and to bring it into disrepute.

TWEEDLE-DEE AND TWEEDLE-DUM

Talking about the queer rules that prevail in the matter of assessment of income taxes the case of the Delmars, husband and wife, may be confidently cited.

The Delmars on New Year's Eve 1932 went to Agua Caliente, just below the California border, had a dinner with plenty of French wine, and then proceeded to break the bank.

As is customary they failed. Mr. Delmar lost $1200. Mrs. Delmar lost $300.

And now the great machinery of state is started to ascertain whether or not the Delmars had undertaken their gambling "for recreation or profit." One must concede that that is quite a poser and would even put the Delmars on the stump. Copious drafts of French wine generally leave people where they haven't any real purpose for anything they do.

But the Delmars thought they would strike a better average apparently by splitting on the question. Mr. Delmar insisted he always gambled for profit. He was able to substantiate his claim by proving that at one time he made some money gambling. Unfortunately Mrs. Delmar was without experience. The income tax board went into a huddle that would have made Solomon green with envy. It determined that Mr. Delmar was entitled to deduct his $1200 loss from his income just the same as if he had lost that money buying mules for the army. But Mrs. Delmar, due to her theretofore sheltered life, was determined to have entered the roulette game purely as a matter of relaxation.

Such is but one of the intricacies of our income tax laws. It is but a slight example of a mountain of confusion, the needless result of the inattention of those who write the laws.

EUROPE IS ETERNALLY STEWING

Just as soon as one situation pregnant with war possibilities is ironed out another presents itself.

One day it is East Prussia. The next day it is the Saar. Then the Polish Corridor shows up. After that Austria. Just now it is Czechoslovakia.

They had a song in the army, "Monday is roast beef," and continued on giving the menu for every day. That wouldn't work in Europe, for a week could not absorb the focal points of their myriad disputes. They certainly could present a different one for every day in the month. Perhaps for a longer time.

Czechoslovakia finds itself assailed from two sources. There are its more than 3 million Germans who prefer to have their capital at Berlin. And now the Hungarians cast angry eyes at part of the Czech lands declaring by resolution: "Czech politicians with falsified maps and forged statistical data, obtained upper Hungary from the great powers of the peace conference."

And if that were not enough to justify a Hungarian attack in order to gain its own resolution continues:

"Czechoslovakia is a bridge permitting Russian Bolshevism to enter Europe."

No consideration is seemingly given to the necessity upon that part of the Czechs of protecting what they think is their own. With Germany hostile and Hungary angry with whom would the Czechs line up if not the traditional enemies of Germany and Hungary?

But one may be very sure that if Czechoslovakia surrendered its own sovereignty and assigned part of itself to Germany and another part to Hungary the boiling, bubbling pot that is Europe would only be quiet for a moment. Trouble would begin to brew elsewhere.

These recurring difficulties, parading before the American people like an August circus, should be valuable in convincing us of the hopelessness of making the European world safe for anything, least of all for democracy.

Opinions Of Others

BISHOP AND REPORTER

Many eminent and noneminent persons, caught in print as saying something which they regret to have said, if their remarks have been criticized, immediately make the reporter responsible. These denials, too often repeated by an unbelieving generation, may sometimes have a queer element of sincerity. Man is a forgetful animal. Public characters may have an institutional nature. They may deem themselves incapable of offending because they don't wish to offend. So the attribution to them of opinions which they have expressed too carelessly must be the offense of the reporter or some devil of a copywriter or editor.

The Bishop of London is a recent case in point. In a sermon he dwelt sorrowfully upon the fact that public school and university men were averse to becoming curates. The church had to depend on retired business men and clerical. In the report of the sermon, the Bishop complains, he was made to say "business men, clerical and men like that." He wrote to the guilty newspaper, sympathizing with the reporter's hard task in trying to sum up a twenty-minute sermon in five lines. "The effect is sometimes disastrous." The summary treatment of his discourse had "given great offense to the excellent men who often at a great sacrifice have given up a business career to be ordained," and so on.

Unfortunately for the Bishop's theory, the reporter's shorthand notes were examined. Business men, clerical and men like that? "Was found to be an exact rendering. The courteous explanation is that with a man, speaking extemporaneously, looks a different way when he reads it next morning. He feels that he couldn't have said what he did say. Reporters makes no pretense to infallibility, but they are often blamed for "misunderstanding" when they have understood too well.—New York Times.

They say that man will lose, through inaction, the use of his legs, which will probably occur in our time, although the generation which has grown up since the motor car became a necessity of life is showing enough already to confirm the biologist in his fears. Trainers and managers of athletes were first to detect a loss of interest in the underpinning of young America. H. G. Salsinger finds Manager Cochran as interested in hardening the legs of his players as in conditioning their arms. Probably nothing he can do in a training season can compensate for the lessening rigor of life for the modern youth, whose father used his legs for the greater part of his locomotion. Instead of being carried, it was Fielding Yost who complained that footballers living a couple of blocks from the field house were jumping into cars to drive to daily practice. In eight games of football in an autumn the effects of a non-walking civilization would perhaps be a noticeable thing in an extended season on the diamond where older athletes are engaged but they seemed appreciable to Yost.

The athlete whose superiority rests on sturdy legs is sometimes, as in Glenn Cunningham's case, a product of special circumstances; while baseball, for its recruits, is turning more and more to the back roads of the south where lifting a gumbo-laden shoe in spring is tiresome exercise for calf and thigh. A very intelligent athlete named Cobb trained the Tigers on the mudiest diamond in his south. Few athletes today could put their legs to the strain to which Cobb's were constantly subjected and hope to stay in action as long as he.—Detroit News.

OUR WISE MAJORITY

The those who occasionally may lose faith in the "practical" feasibility of democracy as a way of life and of government under increasingly complex modern conditions were commended by Dr. George Gallup.

Dr. Gallup directs the American Institute of Public Opinion, whose samplings of opinion are reported in The News and 59 other sustaining newspaper members. In this work he has come to know more about the public mind, probably, than any other individual in the United States, not excepting the shrewdest of politicians. He has this to say, writing in the National Municipal Review: "The public is not omniscient. We have found persons who do not know who the president of the United States is. We have found persons who do not know the difference between the Supreme Court and the local police court. There might be many arguments over the wisdom of positions public opinion is taking today. But in the long run I believe that the evidence amassed by the institute during the last few years absolutely supports the assertion which Theodore Roosevelt once made: 'The majority of the plain people of the United States will, day in and day out, make fewer mistakes in governing themselves than any small group of men will make in trying to govern them.'—Detroit News.

A VISITOR in the office recently asked if he could see Jonah . . . and that brings up a subject that has not been touched upon in quite a while . . . anyway, your correspondent was not available at the time, and is not generally available to visitors or for phone calls, for one very good reason: time . . . the point is simple—your correspondent has a job of work to perform that has nothing whatever to do with the column . . . the column must be worked in to the day's program where it fits best so that it and the job don't get in each other's way. Consequently, if he takes time off the job to discuss the column, then other matters pile up and the actual time of column preparation is curtailed . . . not that he has any objections to talking with people who are interested in the column . . . on the contrary . . . but the day is too short to permit combining conversations and work, and there are some examples in the past that bear out this point of view . . . besides, people who have stopped by in the past were disappointed in what they found . . .

One lady who stopped in once still thinks I'm somewhat on the barmy side, I'll bet. At the time she visited, I was deeply engrossed in something else and by the time I had worked myself around to the conversational viewpoint she had given up in disgust and left.

After a couple of inspirational "uh-huhs," "nice day, isn't it?" and "nice of you to come," you couldn't blame her.

At this writing, Mr. Wrigley of the Cubs can pat himself on the back and explain what a smart gent he is. His expensive Mr. Dean has started two ball games and won two ball games.

While the records are not before me, I am also under the impression, however, that the Cleveland's Mr. Feller, and other less expensive pitchers belonging to various clubs around the circuits, have done just as well.

Still and all, Mr. Dean is on the well known spot, including the one made by people who said the Cardinals sold him because he was all caught up as a pitcher.

And if he maintains his present average, he will end up the season with over 30 games won.

Which is again putting him on the spot

According to an interview with Earl Sande, trainer of Staghound, the Derby favorite, this boss was taught to like to win. Some of my friends, whose luck in betting on the fags has not been so good lately, might save money by visiting Sande.

Or by forgetting to bet.

It'll be nice to get some of that warm March weather before May arrives, won't it?

Jonah-the-coroner

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

PRESERVE THEM . . .

I hear that old familiar phrase begin: "Preserve us in our goings out and comings in," And scarcely heed the rest of it, held fast By this one hope. . . . How swiftly Time was passed! The children have grown up! In their long flight, Preserve them in their goings out each night, Preserve them in their comings in, as well, Bring them back safely where their loved ones dwell. Keep them from accident, and every ill That lurks at night. . . . Strengthen their proud young will, That they may turn from foolishness and sin. . . . Preserve them in their goings out and comings in. (Copyright, 1938)

Personal Health Talks

Noted Physician and Author.

FACIAL PALSY

Gooseflesh, chubblains and frost-bite are, to date, the only ailments definitely due to cold.

In stating this fact I do not mean to imply that cold may not be a contributing or an aggravating factor of numerous other ailments—bellyache, for example, and reasoning purely from analogy I should think one with almost any ache would be more comfortable if he keeps nice and warm. And for that matter, I have plenty to argue about, without questioning the common belief that a victim of chronic rheumatiz, whatever ails him, suffers less in a mild warm climate or in summer than in a cold climate or in winter. At the same time, without uttering one word in the presence of Mr. or Mrs. Wisacre, I reserve my conviction that neither the climate nor the weather nor the amount of clothing the victim wears nor the degree of artificial warmth he maintains in the atmosphere in which he lives has a thing to do with the etiology of his ailment.

From way back the great doctors, authorities, specialists and all have "pronounced" facial palsy to be due to exposure of the face to wind or cold, or to the patient waking one morning and finds he can't whistle, frown, wink or even smile—as the trouble most often manifests itself—it is comparative-ly easy for the learned doctor to shake his head and inform the patient that he or she evidently slept in a draft last night, caught cold in the facial nerve and consequently has facial neuritis. In pathology, however, such an hypothesis cannot satisfactorily account for inflammation of a nerve—but learned doctors sounding off in the consulting-room or in the sick-room do not bother much about pathology. As long as the patient is impressed, that's all that matters, isn't it?

The facial nerve emerges from its origin in the brain thru a channel in the skull bone just behind the ear. The nerve is frequently involved in chronic middle ear inflammation, and this accounts for many instances of facial palsy ascribed to "cold" or exposure to cold drafts on the face.

Sciatica is inflammation of the great sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, half as thick and wide as your thumb. In many cases sciatica is found to be caused by pressure upon the sciatic nerve trunk back of the hip, from subluxation of the sacro-iliac junction. Partial dislocation, relaxation, slip of innominate as the osteopaths call it—the osteopaths recognized these—not uncommon sacroiliac sprains, strains or relaxations long before the regulars did, and in my opinion an osteopath is the right one to consult when you have sciatica, lumbago or any similar disability. In as many cases sciatica is a neuritis of infective character, usually focal infection due to bacteria or their toxins from some long neglected septic focus elsewhere in the body.

Obviously no specific remedy for sciatica can be indicated. In each case the diagnosis and treatment are problems for the physician to solve after careful examination.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Bigger Brady Better Baby Book

Postcard message: Please send Baby Book to—(T. F. G.)

Answer—Only correspondents who comply with instructions can procure a free copy of the Bigger Brady Better Baby Book. These are the instructions: Ask for it in your own writing—no clipping will suffice. Enclose a regular size stamped envelope bearing your address.

If the envelope is less than 3 1/2 by 6 inches, no baby book.

Radio Spaghetti

Rubber tubing on the bows of spectacles to prevent soreness behind the ears is soon softened and rotted by oil from the skin. I have found that radio spaghetti serves the purpose more satisfactorily. This is a fabric tube impregnated with a synthetic varnish impervious to oil—it is obtainable at any radio supply shop. (E. Y. S.)

Answer—Thank you. Perfectly adjusted spectacle bows seldom cause such soreness.

Lettuce and Onions

I am 72 have taken a great fancy to eating lettuce and onions at two meals nearly every day. It is my favorite salad. Will it hurt me in any way? (Mrs. M. A.)

Answer—No, it is a healthful habit.

Your Birthday

"TAURUS"

If April 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 A. M.; from 3 to 5 P. M., and from 9 to 11 P. M. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 A. M.; from 5 to 7 P. M., and from 11 P. M. until midnight.

Competition, in every line of human endeavor, is apt to be exceptionally keen this day. An excessive amount of energy may make the average person restless, and perhaps act in a very aggressive manner. You will display good judgment if you make up your mind not to permit trifling details to upset your disposition, for they may be the cause of most of the day's aggravations. You want to have your own way in some matter this day, and you may find that a conciliatory manner, combined with a tactful suggestion, is liable to be most helpful. The average person is likely to be very susceptible to flattery and you perhaps will have occasion to use some of it adroitly. If you do your personality may help you greatly in a social way, but if you give into a temptation to appear jaded, there is danger of your prejudicing someone against you. Married and engaged couples, as well as those whose ardent love is fully reciprocated, will do well to remember that feelings can be easily hurt this day.

If a woman and April 27 is your birthday, you cannot afford to harbor hatred or grudges, for they may have a bad physical reaction. You should not get into the habit of expressing yourself too vigorously, for this is how many persons born on this date make enemies. Your worldly possessions, including stocks, bonds and monies seem to be coming principally through inheritance or some strange stroke of good fortune. Family ties and home life probably mean more to you than fame or wealth. As a missionary, social welfare worker, teacher, newspaper woman or secretary you ought to be able to make a gratifying record. You ought to possess the attributes need-

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—The president says he is always conscious that he lives in a place which belongs to all the people.

Well, it is a nice house. Come up and see us sometime. You'd never know the old place. We've had the East Room brushed up a bit and the whole establishment looks ever so much better than it did years ago when you were here—or have you been here? We are never quite sure.

Come by the East entrance, if you don't mind. We sort of have to preserve appearances by restricting the North entrance to ambassadors and the like—furriners, you might call them, but they do take on if they are not treated just so.

Oh, by the way, don't expect too much in the way of accommodations. There will be other guests most of the time. About a million (actual figures) drop by every year. Most of them don't really press themselves upon us. Many just look about the front yard a bit and others go with guides along the East corridor and see the East room.

My, the Egg-Rolling

Of course, if you come, we know you will get a letter from your senator or representative so you may see the Red, Blue and Green rooms and the State dining room, which is so nice, with the walnut walls and all.

We have 18 acres with the house, about three in front and 15 in back. We keep the back to ourselves most of the time except on Monday after Easter for the egg-rolling. What a mess that day is. The children mash eggs all over the grass and it smells like spoiled fish for a week afterward.

There are several gardeners to look after the grass and flowers, although we wish we could spend a little more time with it ourselves. If you want a thing done well, you have to do it yourself. But the president for one doesn't have time and we can't seem to get at it. Sometimes we think that with so much help we might raise a few vegetables for the table, but that seems never to have been dreamed of.

We don't have animals to contend with about the place so that doesn't bother us. Mrs. Roosevelt keeps her horses down near the Potomac and we haven't one. The Taffs used to keep a cow in the basement of the White House. Imagine it. But then, those rowdy first Roosevelt children used to take their pony up the elevator right into the house, and T.R. had his horses in the basement.

We did the basement over a while back and now we keep the silver there—there is such a lot of it—and the wine. The cook used to have nothing but an open fireplace but it is all electrified now.

It Saves Money

The president's offices are connected with the White House, really are a part of it. At times it seems sort of common to have the offices right in the same building. It is like living in the back of your grocery store. Yet it is a little cheaper, and so convenient.

We have always felt sort of sorry for poor Abigail Adams. She was the first to live in the place and it was dreadfully wet and cold. She hung the washing in the East room, which now is the most pompous room in the whole place. Too bad she had to be remembered for that.

Some of the other presidents' wives played truce to be remembered by. Mrs. Hoover certainly wasn't going to be forgotten soon. She planted a California redwood in the yard and you know how long they live—thousands and thousands of years.

"Hinduism" Topic at Meeting of League

Black Creek—Miss Bernice Blake led the topic on "Hinduism," at the meeting of the Friday evening of the Evangelical League of St. John Evangelical church. Miss Letha Schultz read the prayer and Miss Arlene Blake the scripture lesson.

Miss Adela Peters played a piano solo and plans were made for a confirmation reunion to be held June 5, at the business meeting, which was followed by games.

Leaders of home economics clubs of the county held an all-day meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. George Laird, town of Ellington. About 23 women attended.

Among those from here who attended were Mrs. R. A. Annunzio, Mrs. H. J. Brandt, Mrs. Herman Eberhardt, Mrs. Leo Stephani, Mrs. C. F. Hahn, Mrs. Claude Armstrong, Mrs. John Wolf and Mrs. George Smith.

The lesson was on the appearance of ready to wear apparel.

Bear Creek Team Wins

2 Games From Shiocton

Bear Creek—The Bear Creek Bargain day was well attended Saturday.

Bear Creek and Shiocton played two games of softball on the local diamond Friday afternoon. Both games resulted in a victory for Bear Creek, 7 to 1 and 7 to 5. The lineup: Shiocton—Bergsbaken, Schwandt, Kringler, H. Conrad, Shepherd, Mantz, K. Conrad, Kadatz, Wolf, Mann and McNish; Bear Creek—V. C. Christensen and Nathan Wied.

Photographic models make the most money, and come into quick-rare. But their careers are short. They click, they flame like starlets over night, they then are forgot. Girls who model clothing, girls who move, live, talk are far more interesting. And their professional life is much longer.

Which, in the final analysis, is something that should be considered.

Gambles When Far Behind

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Duplicate players must take into consideration factors that never enter the picture at rubber bridge. When I am "hooked" at the latter game I do no pressing in a desperate effort to "get even," because there is no logic in such a course. Each additional point that I lose costs me just as much as the points already lost and if, instead of ending up the evening with a 3,000 point loss I increase this to five or six thousand, I cannot console myself with the thought, "Well, I had to lose no matter what I did." In rubber bridge every point won or lost has a definite bearing on the condition of my pocketbook. In duplicate it is just the reverse. The great objective is to win, and your victory will be just as conclusive if you nose out the second team by one-half match-point as though you had swamped the rest of the field. Thus, in a duplicate game, going into the last few rounds with the knowledge that my score to that point has not been good enough to win, it is perfectly logical for me to take all sorts of liberties. If my "fanciness" turns out well I may come out with top score. If it falls flat I will simply have removed myself further from the top position. Let us consider the following hand, using the proper match-point duplicate philosophy.

I sat South. My partner, a fair player, opened the bidding with one heart. There was no point in my "stretching" to respond with two diamonds. In all probability such a bid would result in partner playing the hand at no trump. If no trump was to be the final contract I wanted to be the declarer. So I made the tentative response of one no trump, which, incidentally, happened to be the correct bid. West passed and my partner rebid two hearts. Now, after a pass by East, I really had no right to make another bid. If the hand had come up in the early stages of the game undoubtedly I would have passed and permitted the two hearts to play. But this was near the end and I knew that our match-point score was not very good up to that point. With nothing to lose, therefore, and much to gain, I decided to overbid deliberately in an attempt to snatch a few extra match-points. Hence I rebid two no trump. My partner promptly raised to three and every one passed. West opened the spade jack and I surveyed the dummy. Without the semblance of a club stopper in either hand I dared not let the opening lead ride to my queen. East held the king and would shift to clubs. Moreover, I was not inclined to "look a gift horse in the mouth." I felt lucky enough that clubs had not been opened and saw such a good chance to make nine tricks, and contract, without risking the spade finesse on the spot. That I clattered up with dummy's ace. I then led to my heart queen and returned the jack of diamonds. Of course this lead was a feint on my part. I hardly dared hope that if West held the queen he would be so kind as to cover, and my intention was to put up dummy's diamond ace and, after running as many heart tricks as possible, finesse diamonds on the return. To my complete satisfaction, however, West probably hoping that his partner had something like K-9 of diamonds, covered the jack and my troubles were over. The heart jack did not drop, but I was assured of heart top honors, five diamonds, and the spade ace.

Obviously I had to be lucky and also had to receive the cooperation of an opponent. It is all right to play for this luck and cooperation in a match-point game, when it is vital to improve one's position, but I should not care to take the same risk when playing total points, or when starting out in a match-point duplicate.

A smart variation of the pleated skirt, one of spring's favorite fashions, is seen in this three-piece suit. Playing Instrument May Relieve Child's Tension

BY ANGELO PATRI

The school band is an essential part of school life. Children need music because it is the language of the spirit, and their spirits need the communication and the expression that it affords. Singing together stimulates them profoundly, sets them up with a sense of fitness and a desire to do something to show how good they feel. Any teacher knows that a tired class will fall in a test. Given a few minutes of relaxation, a change of air, and a chance to sing, or march to music, or listen to it, they will attack their task with vigor and success. Music is a tonic to the body and the spirit.

Healthy children move rhythmically. Tired children will move abruptly, jerkily, in broken rhythm, which expresses irritability always. The very best way to calm irritated nerves, to replace fatigue with fitness is to rest in an atmosphere filled with the rhythm and melody of music. Music will help nervous children, brighten dull ones, refresh weary ones and delight the eager ones. It must have a place in the school day.

Certain kinds of music are more effective for certain kinds of children than for others. The band that has drums and fiddles—don't shudder—is ideal for the gangling lads who are not doing so well in lessons and behavior. You see, their bodies are growing fast and their mental operations are slowed down in consequence. Their nerves are strained to the breaking point, which some of the silent assembly, the formal classrooms. Give these boys a chance to whang a drum or strum a fiddle—every day—and they will be much easier to live with; and what is more, they will do better work and grow more harmoniously.

The brasses and woods are a step higher. They are more difficult and require steadier hands and heads than do the drums. The sturdier, more settled in growth among the boys and girls do well with them. Blowing hard is good for growing children, and blowing toward some musical ideal is just about perfect for them. The tensions of the classrooms are a severe strain on the pre-adolescent, but the band lesson soothes and relieves all strain and sends the children away rested and content with the world. As a man-

About Blackheads

P. B. Y.: You say you have been following the same blackhead treatment that helped your cousin so remarkably that you know the treatment to be good; but so far it has failed to help you. In the first place, I do not know precisely what treatment you have been giving yourself; but this much is certain—some people respond more readily to treatment than others. Furthermore, there's the human element. Are you sure you have been following the treatment as conscientiously and regularly as your cousin did? And are you depending upon the condition? Remember that what you eat has much to do with your skin condition. Eat a simple, balanced diet—no excess fats, starches, rich desserts, pastries, fried foods; plenty of stewed fruits, vegetables, salads (but no rich dressings). Bathe twice daily. Exercise in the open. Rest sufficiently. Drink plenty of water and keep bowels open. First—look to the health of your entire system as the foundation; then count on the treatment.

If you would like my complete booklet "Reduce by Diet" (Booklet 201) and "Reduce by Exercise" (Booklet 202) are yours for ten cents each. They cover the subjects thoroughly. Send for them giving your name and address to the Bell Library, care of this newspaper, 247 West 43rd Street, New York, N. Y.

Optical Illusions in Make-Up

D. H.: You say you have heard that with make-up and hairdressing tricks one can make a very round face seem more oval—that your face is the roundest part of you and you would like to know some tricks. Very well. You can effect optical illusions in make-up. In hairstyle, in dress. First, sweep your hair high to carry the eye up. Wear V necklines on your dresses to carry the eye up and down, in an almost vertical line. Do not carry your rouge out on your cheeks—instead leave a little space between nose and place where rouge starts and another space between rouge and outer contour of face. Have the color appear in a somewhat limited, vertical area. Avoid a very vivid rouge and choose a powder slightly darker than your skin.

If you wish my complete bulletin on Make-Up, please write me, care of Appleton Post-Crescent for it enclosing self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Hygiene agent the band is priceless. Then comes the school orchestra. Here are gathered the real musicians. They take their music seriously. The drums and the tooters are graduated to the orchestra, when and if they have the gift. Here are the sensitive violinists, the temperamental harpists, the soulful cellists and the fiery pianist. Here too is the orchestra leader, quivering to his finger tips, demanding, driving, pulling these musicians toward tonal perfection and divinity of expression. A good school orchestra is to the school what a good doctor, and a fine clergyman, and a skilled mental hygienist are to a community—present helps when help is needed most, towers of strength when strength is needed, stimulants to greater, nobler effort when the spirit falters and the flesh is weak.

When children are dull, or unhappy, or troublesome, strike up the band, and, better still, let them play in it. There is an instrument for every one of them, and a place.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

FOR BRIGHTENING LINENS

Uncle Ray's Corner

Magnets and the Compass

Yesterday I spoke of a way to turn an ordinary iron rod into a magnet by holding it toward the north, on a slant, and striking the upper end with a hammer.

Compass of type widely used in airplanes. It shows very slight changes in direction.

My tests worked well, indeed. Not only was I able to make a compass needle move with the rod, but I also was able to lift a few bits of iron—iron filings.

How can such a thing be? That question can be answered only by a knowledge of the magnetic lines of the earth. The earth, itself, is a great big magnet. So-called "lines of force" pass between the north magnetic pole and the south magnetic pole. The lines of force have power in them to do something to an iron rod when it is held slanting toward the north, and is struck sharp blows.

You could hold the iron rod in that direction for hours, and nothing would happen to it. To make the magnet, you must also strike it with a hammer or other tool. The hammer blows do something to the iron. We do not know exactly what they do, but it seems almost certain that this is what happens:

Tiny parts of the iron are made to "line up like soldiers." Before the hammer blows, they are "facing" in all directions. Afterward they probably face toward the north, or toward the south.

The tiny parts may be "molecules," or they may be "atoms." In any case, they appear to let the earth's magnetic lines of force pass through the rod when the test is made.

If you hold an iron rod (which has not been magnetized) toward the east or west, your hammer blows will not turn it into a magnet.

Long ago in China, and probably elsewhere in the Orient, men found that a needle could be turned into a magnet by being placed on a loadstone, or by rubbing it against a loadstone. Afterward, this needle could be hung in balance, and one end would turn toward the north, the other toward the south.

That fact made it possible to produce the famous instrument known as a compass. In early days, the needle was placed in a straw, and the straw was placed in water. Then the floating straw would turn north, and south.

Dix Repeats Ten Rules As Guide for Happiness

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—A long time ago you wrote an article on "happiness" that has been a sort of guide to my feet and has helped me a lot. I wonder if you will republish it, because I want to send it to a friend who needs just such a philosophy badly.

MRS. H. P. S.

Answer:

I can't resist the flattery of anybody wanting me to be a repeater, so here are the ten rules for happiness that I gave:

First. Make up your mind to be happy. Happiness is largely a matter of self-hypnotism. You can think yourself happy or you can think yourself miserable. It is up to you which you do. Grab all the innocent amusements that come your way. Never miss an opportunity to have harmless fun. Learn to find pleasure in simple things. If you can't go to the opera, you can turn on the radio. Nail on your face the smile that won't come off, and after a bit you will find that it comes there naturally.

Second. Make the best of your lot. Of course, you have not everything you want and things are not just right. Nobody is that lucky. Even the most fortunate have a lot of crumpled rose leaves under their forty mattresses of ease. There isn't a single human being who hasn't plenty to cry over, and the trick is to make the laughs outweigh the tears.

Third. Don't take yourself too seriously. Don't think that everything that happens to you is calamity; that we felt might be somehow you should have been protected against the misfortunes that befall other people. When death robs you of one you love, or you lose your job, don't demand to know of high heaven why this should have happened to you and grow rebellious and morbid over your sorrow. We are never happy until we learn what funny little things we are and learn to laugh at ourselves.

Fourth. Don't take other people too seriously. They are not so much, anyway. Don't let their criticisms worry you. You can't please everybody, so please yourself. Don't let your neighbors set your standards for you. Don't run into debt trying to keep up with the Joneses, or bore yourself to death trying to be as intellectual as the Highbrows. Be yourself and do the things you enjoy doing if you want to be comfortable and happy.

Fifth. Don't borrow trouble. You have to pay compound interest on Sixth. Don't cherish enemies and grudges. Don't keep up old quarrels. Don't remember all the mean things people have done to you. Forget them. Hate is a deadly chemical that we distill in our own hearts that poisons our own souls. It takes all the joy out of life and hurts us far worse than it does any one else. There is nothing so depressing as having a grudge against some one. Nothing makes a home so miserable as for the family not to be on good terms. Meeting some one you don't speak to will spoil any party. So if you have an enemy, forgive him and kiss him on both cheeks, not for his sake, but simply because it is making you unhappy and uncomfortable and is stirred up with wrath against him.

Seventh. Meet in circulation. Go around and meet people. Belong to clubs. Travel as much as you mean. Have as many interests as possible. Have hosts of friends. That is the way to keep yourself cheerful and jolly and thinking this is the best of all possible worlds. It is the little bird that hops around that sings a merry roundelay, not the calm little bird that stays shut up in its shell.

Eighth. Don't hold post mortems. Don't spend your life brooding over the mistakes you have made or the sorrows that have befallen you. What is done is done and cannot be changed, but you have your whole future life in which to make good. Not all our tears can bring back those we have lost, but we can make life miserable for ourselves and those about us by our unavailing weeping. Quit beating upon your breast because you haven't as much money as you used to have. Don't be one of those who never get over things. Have the courage to take misfortune on the chin and come up smiling.

Ninth. Do something for somebody less fortunate than yourself.

SCHOOL GIRLS AND BOYS

The following letter is the last one in a long list, sent me by a high school, which I have been printing every Tuesday for some weeks:

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it ever permissible for a man (who wears gloves) to shake hands with another who does not wear gloves? If both wear gloves, do they have to remove them to shake hands?

Answer: If both wear wearing gloves, they would shake hands without removing them. If one had on street gloves and the other no gloves, the one who had on street gloves would pull his off, or if buttoned on or otherwise inconvenient to remove, he would probably say "Excuse my glove," just as he would if he were shaking hands with a lady. I used the phrase "would probably" because this formality is not as strictly observed as when shaking hands with a lady.

Dear Mrs. Post: My young daughter is going to her first high school dance. Her brother is taking her. The school is a distance from our house, and on any other evening than this my husband would have been able to drive them to the dance. As it happens, he has to use the car for business purposes that evening, but he has promised to stop for them later and bring them home. This means, however, that either they will have to go to the dance on a street car or bus, as the several dollars necessary for a taxi are not possible, or stay at home. My daughter claims that it would not be in good taste for her to wear evening clothes to ride in a public street car or bus. I believe your answer will more or less coincide with my feeling, and that it is not usually done but not seriously improper. Will you write something for us and others who may want to know about this same situation.

Answer: It is not often done because it is rather taken for granted that those who can afford the sort of evening clothes that are unsuitable on a bus should be able to pay the comparatively low fare for a short distance in a taxi. But those who have to go a long distance might certainly take a bus. I would suggest that she carry her thin-soled dancing slippers in a small bag of almost any dark, inconspicuous material, and wear ordinary slippers or shoes and change them in the dressing room. This is done in innumerable cases, and in the fashion of this modern day among the very young, she might tie a handkerchief around her head, peasant fashion, so that her hair is not completely bare. To stay at home from the party because she can't afford an expensive taxi fare would be foolish.

Dear Mrs. Post: In our English course, which also includes the study of manners, we have been unable to decide the correct manner to present a young celebrity, who happens to be the guest of honor, to a very much older person. Will you tell us how this introduction should be made.

Answer: Present him to all ladies. Present young men to him, and present him to each other gentleman. In other words, the fact of his being guest of honor and a celebrity would give him a rating of somewhat increased age, but nothing resembling great age.

Old Gardener Says:

Daphne cneorum is a very capricious plant. It often thrives in one garden and refuses to grow in another not far away. The fact has been established, however, that it prefers a soil containing a generous amount of sand or gritty loam. It does not thrive in a heavy soil, and one cannot expect it to live if it is in a damp place. Apparently, Daphne cneorum does better in the rock garden than anywhere else, perhaps because of the better drainage it gets there. If difficulty with the name is found, it comes from the fact that the last word is spelled "cneorum." When the name is pronounced, however, the "c" is omitted, and we get "ne-or-um."

Vote $4,000 From Relief Budget to Finance WPA Job

Menasha Council Provides Funds for Curb, Gutter Project

Menasha — The city council voted $4,000 from the relief budget to be used in financing a WPA curb and gutter project at the special meeting Monday evening at the city hall. A board of public works hearing has been called for the next meeting, May 3, at which objections to the project will be heard. Parts of Taylor, First, Appleton, DePere, Seventh, Jefferson and Manitowish streets are included in the project. The $4,000 will carry the project four months after which the council hopes to finance further projects through the sale of improvement bonds. The funds were transferred from the relief budget as the project is considered work relief which is keeping able bodied men off direct relief.

The aldermen, uncertain in their new posts and still unfamiliar with the duties of the various committees, proceeded hesitantly. Some favored using $15,000; some $8,000; some $2,000 while still others favored taking money from the relief fund and depositing it in the street department fund as some of the sewer construction work has been financed by the street department.

Mayor S. J. Henson said, "The city is broke" and averred that he would not sign a check for a nickel over the budget of any of the departments. He also stated that the stadium would cost $10,000 to complete but that he would not authorize the expenditure of more than the $4,000 already set aside. He questioned the residence of men working on WPA. The mayor also stated that there was a deficit in every budget and when some of the aldermen pointed out that there was $71,000 in the general fund, according to the treasurer's report, Jensen still insisted that the city was broke and that he would call for a state audit.

The mayor, city clerk and city engineer were authorized to draw up and make application to the WPA for a city-wide sidewalk project, to include repair and construction of new sidewalks.

A five man electric commission was set up by the council in accord with the electrical ordinance recently adopted. Members of the commission are Reuben Vogel, master electrician; Sam Michelson, journeyman; Earl Hill, representing the mills; J. H. Kuester, superintendent of the water and light department; and William Karrow, representing the council.

Seek Cement Bids
The council voted to advertise for 1,600 barrels of cement to be used as required for use in the curb and gutter and other projects. The bids are returnable at the May 17 meeting. Names of three streets were authorized by the council. The short street between Lisbon and Eighth was named Pacific while the street in the Bullard plat was named Bullard Court. The name of Clay street was changed to Center street.

Alderman John Eckrich said that steel was necessary within three days to keep men working at the stadium. He introduced a resolution authorizing the mayor and city clerk to purchase steel up to $500 while steps to advertise for bids will be made at the next meeting.

Alderman Earl Sauter called attention to the ordinance calling for separation of sanitary and storm water drains pointing out that the sewer disposal plant could not handle the load.

Mayor Jensen said, "I'm inclined to question if that would help. The commission said that it would cost $15,000 to operate a plant yet in five years we spent $38,000 and the mills are still dumping into the river." He described the sewage disposal plant as "another thing bluffed onto the taxpayer. It's lousy!" He said that meeting with the commission would do no good. "The people of Menasha were goats on the sewer plant and the school. I stand alone on that and defy anyone."

The matter was dropped and a bill of $262 for freight was allowed before the council adjourned.

Rotarians Must

Aid Communities,

Dr. Barker Says

Club Members Urged to

Take Cognizance of

Responsibilities

Neenah—Stating that Rotarians are the leading men in their communities, Dr. Charles E. Barker, Grand Rapids, Mich., former physical instructor to William Howard Taft, urged Neenah and Menasha clubs at a joint session Monday night at the Valley Inn to take cognizance of responsibilities placed upon them, warning them that to "shirk those duties makes you the loser."

Dr. Barker, a noted Rotary lecturer, gave four talks in Neenah and Menasha Monday night. He talked to the Neenah High school students in the morning and to Menasha High school students in the afternoon on "How to Make the Most out of Life." His final talk was given after the joint meeting at a mass meeting in the Menasha High school auditorium on "The Most Important Job in the World."

The Rotarian listed these responsibilities: Demonstrating the value of friendship to the rest of the communities, attending church, service, killing gossip, supporting school systems and working industriously.

Should Attend Church
"For the sake of the influence on boys and girls in your cities, it is your responsibility to attend church," he said, and then quoted the Rotary motto, "He profits most who serves best," in stressing the "most important lesson in life."

"Malicious gossip has hurt, damaged and pushed more innocent people into the background," according to Dr. Barker, and he urged the Rotarians to form a mythical anti-gossip society. He also urged that Rotarians get behind their school systems so that boards of education will be composed of the best men in the community, men who will not play politics.

The most important people in the community are the teachers, he said, because they take care of the children, helping to develop their characters, from the time they are six to 18 years of age, being with them five hours a day, five days a week for nine months of the year. Dr. Barker concluded his talk by telling the Rotarians to make service, helping others, the motive of life instead of piling up fortunes.

Move to Condemn

Land Intended for

Power Substation

Menasha Council Authorizes Attorney to Institute Proceedings

Menasha—The first of the steps necessary to secure a site for the substation to be built by the water and light commission was inaugurated at the special council meeting at the city hall Monday evening when the council authorized Edward C. McKenzie, city attorney, to start condemnation proceedings to secure title to lots 1 to 8, block 50, Second ward. The lots are located between the Marathon plant and the Whiting Paper company on Canal street. Condemnation proceedings will be started in county court before Judge D. E. McDonald.

Condemnation proceedings were started for that property once before when the commission contemplated building a steam generating plant and the resolution last night merely was altered to allow for the construction of the substation. The proceedings were dropped the first time after the commission agreed to purchase power from the Wisconsin Michigan Power company.

Edward W. Forkin, attorney for the water and light commission, explained that the Menasha Wooden Ware, owners of the lots in question, asked $10,000 for the property which the commission thought was too high.

City to Hold Title
The water and light department will pay for the land but the city will hold the title. Plans of the commission are to start construction of the substation as soon as possible. Mr. Forkin explained that the commission could take possession immediately after the condemnation proceedings are started by depositing a bond of $10,000, the amount asked by the Wooden Ware for the property.

The water and light commission was authorized to build a substation which would not exceed $58,000, including equipment, by the state public service commission Monday. The substation will be used to lower the voltage of the whole sale current purchased from the power company.

The water and light commission has signed an agreement with the power company by which the utility will furnish base load power to the city at a rate two mills lower per kilowatt than it costs to manufacture power at the present Diesel plant. The agreement is to run for five years and the city will not serve any large users of power who are not now served by the city while the power company will solicit no business from residential or small power users.

Plans Approved
Approved by the public service commission Monday, the water and light department secured permission from the public service commission to go ahead with construction of a steam plant if the load should become heavy enough to make it practical.

Of the $58,000 authorized for construction of the substation, $40,000 in materials, switchboards and similar equipment could be used if a steam plant were to be built. The other $18,000 would be required for four transformers. The plant would have a high resale value if the water and light commission should have no use for them if a steam plant were built.

An advantage of the proposed location, particularly in the event a steam plant is built, is that coal could be hauled by either water or train. Mr. Forkin pointed out, Mr. Forkin also emphasized that the present Diesel plant of the city would continue in operation without any change in the staff.

The smallest economical steam plant is one which would produce 2,000 kilowatts at eight mills per kilowatt. The plant would cost $300,000. Even if the steam plant is eventually built the Diesel plant will be maintained to meet peak demands while the steam plant would carry the base load. Cost of producing current at the Diesel plant is nine mills per kilowatt while the utility is selling current to the city at seven mills. The present contract calls for a maximum of 2,400 kilowatts demand service.

Lobby Committee Fails to Follow Fair Play Rules

Seeks Evidence to 'Smear' Opponents of Bill, Lawrence Charges

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—If there is one characteristic of American public opinion which stands out above all others, it is the desire for fair play in public controversy.

Not long ago, for instance, President Roosevelt said he did not object to an inquiry into the TVA or Chairman Clegg's charges provided it was a "fair inquiry." For several weeks since, an effort has been made to get a "fair" committee and finally Vice President Garner has picked such a committee. Men like Senators Norris and Bridges, who had pronounced views on the TVA question, were not appointed.

So it came about that a spirit of fairness began to pervade the atmosphere in Capitol Hill, and when President Roosevelt was beaten by a majority in the house of representatives in his effort to put through a bill to reorganize the executive departments, he sent a letter to Majority Leader Rayburn promising that there would be no "recriminations."

Turn On Opponents
In the face of such professions of fair play, it is rather depressing to report that the senate lobby committee now has turned on the opponents of the reorganization bill in an effort to produce evidence that might smear or discredit such opponents in the public mind. And President Roosevelt, himself, one regrets to observe, has gone so far as to hand over to the lobby committee by special executive order the confidential income tax returns of the persons who are about to be smeared.

The original purpose of congress, no doubt, in making it possible for the president to hand over income tax returns for the examination of congressional committees, was to let such committees ascertain whether the income tax laws were being evaded or avoided or being complied with. It never was intended that the income tax returns would be utilized as a sort of weapon of slander and smear. Even more unfair is the fact that the present majority members of the lobby committee are the same ones who took an active part on behalf of the administration in connection with the president's reorganization bill. By all the rules of fairness, if men like Senators Bridges and Norris are disqualified from sitting on a congressional investigating committee because of the militant character of their espousal of a cause, so also are the members of the lobby committee unsuited to carry on investigations relating to subjects in which they have a special interest.

Private Telegrams
The lobby committee of the senate was appointed a couple of years ago in response to a senate resolution seeking to investigate lobbying by public utility companies. The inquiry was headed by Senator Black, and, during the course of its proceedings, an arrangement of some kind was effected with the federal communications commission for the seizure of private telegrams, which seizure was denounced as illegal by the circuit court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

In the face of that record, whenever the administration wants any smearing done, it apparently sends word to revive the lobby committee. It is somewhat of a surprise that, when President Roosevelt said something recently about the votes of the senators being "purchased" in connection with the vote on the reorganization bill, no effort was made to find out through the lobby committee just whose votes in the senate could be purchased.

The continued existence of the lobby committee is proof of the fact that several members of the senate think their colleagues are not to be trusted to take care of themselves when petitions are presented to them on behalf of the citizenry and that a special committee must continue to investigate the exercise by the people of their constitutional right of petition.

Right of Petition
The right of petition is as sacred as the right of free speech because it is guaranteed by the constitution as a part of the bill of rights. While the right of petition cannot be taken away affirmatively, there are plenty of ways negatively by which its exercise can be hampered, if not impeded. This smearing propaganda—and, by the way, there never has been any congressional inquiry into that matter—and the citizens, in order to defeat undesirable legislation, must band themselves together into organizations. It is precisely because the individual citizen often feels helpless in getting his petition to the hands of members of congress that national organizations representing various causes function.

In a sense, every effort to influence a legislator can be called "lobbying" and a wrong connotation given to the term. But, on the other hand, there are many legitimate causes in which efforts are made to influence legislation, and it would be a serious blow to them if a congressional committee succeeded in instilling fear so that contributions of small sums to defray expenses in carrying on the work of petitioning government were not to be forthcoming. Take the committee to uphold constitutional government. Whether its views are right or wrong is beside the question. Their members feel justified in appealing to their fellow citizens to appeal to congress. If the senate and house are not to be depended upon to distinguish

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau. Oshkosh—Three damage suits in circuit court for a total of $21,300 against A. J. Coffey, former Oshkosh alderman, brought by Cecil Carpenter, Oshkosh, were settled out of court late yesterday afternoon. Another case, also brought before Judge C. F. Van Belt, Fond du Lac, in circuit court, that of Carpenter versus Cook and Brown Lime company, Oshkosh, was settled this morning. All four cases resulted from an auto accident June 20, 1937.

PLACED ON PROBATION
Neenah—Charles Graham, S. Lake street, Neenah, was fined $5 and costs and was put on probation for 60 days to Police Chief C. H. Watts when he pleaded guilty to drunkenness and disorderly conduct when arraigned in justice court this morning. The defendant was arrested Monday afternoon by Neenah police.

10 DAYS IN JAIL
Neenah—James Van Dervien, transient, was sentenced to 10 days in county jail when he pleaded guilty of vagrancy when arraigned before Justice L. O. Cooke in court this morning. Van Dervien was arrested by Neenah police last night.

between proper and improper appeals, then a dozen lobby committees will not help them. What is most important is that the senate give to the American people another example of fair play by asking either that its lobby committee be discontinued or that its operations be limited to specific acts of legislation on which a prima facie case of improper lobbying has been made before the senate itself. Otherwise, the continued presence of this committee will tend to destroy all confidence in the administration's new cry of fair play.

Many Improvements Made in Business Places at Chilton

Chilton—Widening of Main street from Madison to State last fall gave many business men the impetus to improve their places of business. The new fronts on the McGrath Drug store and the Bauman and Jensen store as well as the Weber Harness Shop were completed last fall. The Berger and the Brandes Markets have both just completed new fronts to their buildings composed of the new glass bricks. Gambles have just got settled in their new surroundings, the former Henry Kroll Grocery store and The Economy Boys have recently opened in the Joseph Kahn building. Dedication of the new city hall and fire house last fall left the old fire house vacant and it has been purchased by former Mayor John Dietrich. Mr. Dietrich has also torn the front out of this building and is remodeling the interior for a new tavern. Mr. Doolan, who will retire from his mail route on a government pension the last of June, has just finished an addition to his home next door to the Chilton theater where he will operate a popcorn stand.

The Hipke Drug store is having the front remodeled this week and the Hines and Bessler garage, in which a new heating plant was recently installed, is having a new parts vault installed this week.

Gordon Wolff, who purchased the Koller store a month ago, has torn out the front and also the interior partitions inside the store. The store will be ready for business about June 1. Mr. Wolff is still operating his General Store at Hilbert and will do so until he is ready to open in this city. Mrs. Anna Parman has opened a Style shop in the Shink building which was occupied until now by Dr. Pinnow who has taken an office in the Fox apartments.

The survey and investigation of the new post office site on E. Main street, opposite St. Mary's church, has been started by Charles E. Legris, construction engineer of the United States Treasury department. Mr. Legris estimates that actual work on the building will start next fall in which case the building will be ready for occupancy about June, 1939.

Foot Balance Indicator On Demonstration Here

A new invention, the foot balance indicator, used until recently only in laboratories, is being demonstrated this week at Dame's Foot Center in the Irving Zuehlke building.

A representative of the Foot and Shoe Research Institute of Danville, Ill., is demonstrating the device, heralded as the single greatest invention in shoe fitting. It shows the relation of foot balance to body balance and its effect on foot comfort.

Street Committee Will Consider Improvements

Resolutions requesting improvements in various sections of the city, submitted at last Wednesday's council meeting, will be considered by members of the street and bridge committee at a meeting this afternoon in city hall. Included are requests for catchbasins, sewers, sidewalks and graveling and oiling roads.

We find that many cases of backache, tiredness, nervousness, backache and leg and foot pains quickly respond to treatment of the feet.

To neglect your feet is to neglect two of the most important parts of the body.

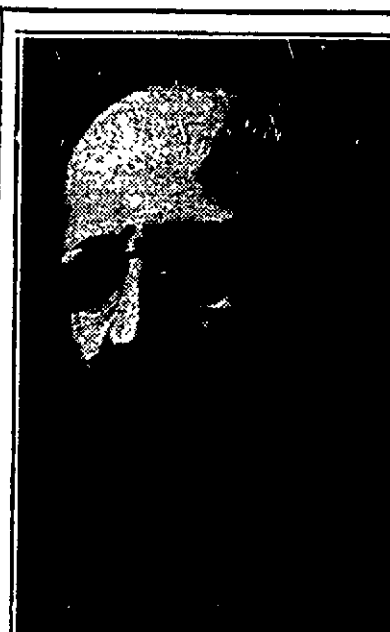

Painful feet interfere with one's work, discourage the exercise so vital to health, spoil life's pleasures and make a person feel miserable. Never neglect your feet. Come in now for a complete check-up.

Open House Is Held at Waupaca Lumberyard

Waupaca — The Fuller-Goodman Lumber company with James C. Miller, manager, held "open house" Saturday at their recently remodeled and equipped lumber and coal yards. Although a belated housewarming, the company having moved to their present location on the corner of Osborn and Ware street during the middle of last summer, many had never visited the new yards and a special drive on paint and roofing was made the occasion of a tour of inspection. Coffee and sandwiches were served throughout the day to the 100 or more visitors.

The Fuller-Goodman plant was originally on the bank of the Waupaca river on Shearer street, a landmark of Civil war times when the business was established by J. J. Jardine. Here J. F. Jardine was born on the exact site of the mill office and here he worked for years in the yards and mills. At the time the plant was called the Eagle Planing Mill, for the Eagle regiment to which Mr. Jardine belonged.

The Central Lumber company was the outgrowth of the early mill and was organized and incorporated in 1902 with J. E. Morgan as president and F. A. Fuller secretary. The name was again changed as ownership changed and it is now the property of the Fuller-Goodman company.

In making the change of sites the company lost valuable water power but gained trackage rights—two tracks connecting with the present property. Few farmers today haul logs by sled and even the planing mill is a doubtful value in a modern mill, the materials coming by train are already sized and cut, ready for retail sale.

The old mill property and water rights revert to the Jardine estate.

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

A Case for the Civil Liberties Union

A few days ago, on Thursday of last week, newspaper men in Washington learned that the President had ordered the Treasury to let Senator Minton's committee inspect the income tax returns of individuals and corporations for 1936 and 1937. The order was actually issued two days previously but, curiously, at least three of the five members of the committee, Senators Schwelmbach, Frazier and Gibson, did not know the order had been issued until they were asked about it by newspaper men.

This is the committee of which the former Senator from Alabama, now Mr. Justice Black, was chairman. It is the committee which was set up in 1935 to investigate lobbying against the holding company bill and is now, with Mr. Minton as Mr. Black's successor, investigating the opposition to the reorganization bill. The Treasury order giving Mr. Minton the right to inspect income tax returns was signed by the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Magill, on Saturday, April 9. The reorganization bill was defeated in the House on the evening of Friday, April 8.

May Put Any Taxpayer On Trial Before Committee
Under the power vested in Senator Minton, he may now put any taxpayer or any corporation on trial before his committee, he being the judge, the prosecutor and the jury. He may now make public the financial condition of any taxpayer who was opposed to the reorganization bill, and his victims have no protection. Senator Minton may attack any one he chooses. He can destroy his reputation. There are no rules of evidence. There are not the ordinary legal safeguards which even the worst criminal enjoys.

Can there be any question that this is a lawless abuse of official authority, and that it is irreconcilable with any American law? In order to obtain revenue, the government consents individuals and corporations to disclose the facts about their financial condition. Then, under an administrative ruling, this information is made available to a Senator engaged not in studying the tax laws, but in investigating something wholly unconnected with the raising of taxes.

The information concerns only a relatively small number of citizens. Of this small number some must face the ordeal of having their private affairs published to the world; others will not be subjected to this punishment. The selection of those who are to be punished is the prerogative of a Senator engaged in a partisan campaign. He alone has the authority to decide who is to be punished and who is not to be punished. There is no pretense that all citizens are to be treated alike, that every citizen must have his private affairs published. There is no pretense that all income taxpayers are to be treated alike. There is no pretense that all income taxpayers who might be charged with tax evasion or avoidance are to be treated alike.

Senator Minton is authorized by the President to embarrass, worry, terrorize and destroy those particular taxpayers who, Mr. Minton feels, had no right to oppose a bill sponsored by Senator Minton's party. If this is not to be described as arbitrary government and capricious tyranny what is the accurate way to describe it?

Should Congress If It Means to Give Power
If Senator Minton and the members of his committee wish to act in the spirit of the law, they will not accept this power on the extremely uncertain authority of the President. They will take the open and honest course, which is to ask Congress itself to say whether it means to give the committee this power. Let the matter be debated, and let us at least find out whether

Church Group Meets at Leroy Thede Dwelling

Leeman — Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Thede entertained the Young People's Christian Endeavor society of the Church of Christ at their home Friday evening. Mrs. Thede was in charge of the evening's program with the topic, "Will the Teachings of Jesus Work Today?"

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Johnson, Mrs. Anna Ames, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Bodon, Miss Eleanor Grandy, Mrs. S. F. Greely, Miss Elaine Greely, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Boyer, Mrs. William Planert, Miss Maymie Rader, Glenn Planert, the Misses Dorothy, Marion and Jeanette Curtis, Mrs. Richard Nelson, Mrs. Esther Drier, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Attoe and daughter, Arlys Ann. The next meeting of the society has been postponed on account of an epidemic of chicken pox in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Larson were guests at a dinner Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lange in New London. The occasion was the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Larson and Mrs. Lange.

Robert Meyer has returned to his home here from the Community hospital in New London where he had been confined with a broken leg. Mr. Meyer was injured while hauling hay at the Boddy farm a couple of weeks ago.

Mrs. Clarence Thompson was called to Navarino Sunday noon by the death of her father, Torger Christenson.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Gomm and sons Ralph and Elton of Manitowish were dinner guests Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Nelson.

Mrs. H. F. Schroeder returned to her home here Sunday from Appleton where she has been taking treatments for injuries received in a fall at her home last winter. A card party was given Friday evening at Pleasant Hill school by the Parent-Teacher association of the district. Prizes were won at cards by Mrs. Lester Johnson, women's high, and Francis Wilkinson, men's high, and Mrs. Alice Carpenter and George Olson, low.

there exists a majority in favor of the grant of such inquisitorial powers.

The issue is an important one, for it turns upon a fundamental conception of civil liberty and of the limitation of official power by law. It is as fundamental a question of civil liberty as Mayor Hague's recent performances; the only difference, which ought not to be considered a difference at all, is that here the victims are to be rich men and in Jersey City they were members of the C. I. O.

In Jersey City the Civil Liberties Union went into action. In this instance it is the American Liberty League. If only the roles could be reversed, one would feel more certain about the future of liberty in this country. It would be exhilarating indeed to see the American Liberty League defending the rights of C. I. O. against the lawlessness of Mayor Hague in Jersey City and to see the Civil Liberties Union leading the fight against the lawlessness of men like Black and Minton. I have a notion that if this happened even once, with organizations would rise greatly in public esteem.

Pegler Cites New Angle For Lobby Investigation

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER
New York—There is no reason why the senate should not investigate the recent telegraphic lobby against the reorganization bill, but certainly the boys should not be permitted to call it a day after they have finished with the national committee to uphold constitutional government. The case cannot be regarded as closed until the statesmen have made an equally thorough and equally hostile and harassing inquiry into the basis, if any, for certain reports which were carried out of Washington on the day of the vote. These reports were much more grave than the mere news that senators were being swamped with telegrams. They reflected on the sacred honor of the senate itself, and surely the senate, wearing its honor on its sleeve, cannot honorably ignore them. It was reported on that day that White House messengers were busy on the hill and Jimmy Roosevelt, the self-less secretary with the passion for anonymity, incidentally, seems to be in need of a strong apologetic, was mentioned by name as one of those who lobbied for the bill. The others were not mentioned by name. They seemed to be sinister and mysterious figures, but the committee, with all its powers and its talent for gouging facts out of bashful victims on the stand, could easily identify them and drag from them the details of their conversations with the statesmen regarding their position on that bill.

Pegler

A broad interpretation of the news wired out of Washington as the bill went to a vote would have it that senators were being offered something mighty like bribes to vote for the bill and threatened with reprisals by the administration should they vote wrong. All right, who were the messengers and precisely what did they say to what senators? What promises did they make? Did the promises, if any, involve chunks of public money for distribution in their states to help the re-election, and, if so, why should the committee bother with anything so petty as a mere over-night paper organization which kicked up a public alarm and whose opinion of the bill later was confirmed by the house of representatives?

Should Look Into Lobbying In Favor of Bill
If the investigation is to be thorough and not merely a punishment for opposition, the senators should now look into the lobbying in favor of the bill. The inquiry should bring to the stand every member of the senate and every messenger who approached any senator that day or any other day during the contest, to tell under oath exactly what was said and what assurances were exchanged. It may be remembered that after the senate had passed the bill the president remarked that the vote proved they could not be purchased. But it may be remembered further that, in view of the reports about the White House lobby, many persons thought and still believe that it proved exactly the opposite. The committee has powers that newspaper reporters have not. Yet reporters on the hill observed or were told of the operations of a lobby, which, if it had been working in the same way for the other side of the question, would now be laid over a barrel. If the newspaper men could learn about this with their limited privileges, then the senators must have heard of it, and if the reports are true then some members of the senate are guilty of withholding information which they ought to volunteer.

"Ex-Convict" Angle Less Evil Than It Sounds
The fact that the organization which lobbied against the bill included an "ex-convict" is much less evil than it sounds when it is understood that Dr. Edward A. Rumley, the "ex-convict," was convicted under a war-time act and was pardoned later. This was an ex-convict in the house of representatives a few years ago, and there are members of the senate at present whose records show dealings which, in slightly different circumstances, might have made convicts of them. So on that score, the national committee to uphold constitutional government need feel only the most nominal embarrassment with respect to Rumley's past, which is immaterial and shouldn't have been mentioned unless the senate is willing to inspect the career of its own members. If smearing fair play in this investigation, then it should be impartial. Here is a case in which the committee is ignoring reports, apparently based on information available to every senator. The reports amount to charges that senators were tempted with inducements or threatened with political punishment. Those senators and the agents of the lobby are all at hand for questioning any time the lobby committee wants to get at the truth.

Report Big Drop in State Production of Syrup This Spring
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Reports from county agents in Wisconsin's maple sugar belt, extending from northwestern and central Wisconsin across to the northeastern tip, indicate that the 1938 supply of the product is exceptionally low, according to marketing experts in the state department of agriculture and markets. Production of syrup was reported to be from 60 to 75 per cent less last year in one county, according to W. L. Witte, marketing chief. One producer who usually makes about 400 gallons has made

The Boxwood Barrier

By BLANCHE SMITH FERGUSON

The Story So Far: In love with dashing Gary Brent, Judith Goodie marries Reuben Oliver for his money—only to discover he is bankrupt. Twins are born and Reuben loses a mental nursing job. Through red-headed Cissy Rogers, who loves him, Reuben gets work in Gary's lumber camp and joyfully sends for Judith. Through an accident Judith's tent is not put up, and when she arrives Gary provides a cabin for her. Returning from the woods, Reuben finds that Judith has gone to a dance with Gary. Jealousy and black rage take possession of him.

Capter 31
"Cruel To Do That!"

BACK at Plot 16 Reuben ripped off his necktie, rolled up his sleeves and fell to work as though pursued by a million demons. If he had labored all day he worked with frenzy now. He drove staples. Put up the ridge pole. Unaided, spread the canvas.

Tied it down. Have to take out that stake—

The ten solid at last. Reuben set up the cot. Screwed electric bulbs into sockets. Arranged the outside grill, then, still in the throes of senseless anger, went to Winding Hill cabin and over the protests of Alf took blankets, bundles, his sleeping babies to his own rooftop and put them to bed. Then he sat outside the tent and stared unseeing into the darkness. Every blast of the saxophones, every throb of the drums added to his rage Judith was down there dancing—dancing with Gary. His mind went back to the day in Maryland he had asked her to marry him. She loved Gary—she had told him so that day. She still loved Gary—once he had been sure he was the better man!

The dance at the pavilion differed from any dance Judith had ever attended. It was as cosmopolitan as though it were on the

Society Prepares Report on Survey Of Medical Needs

State Medical Group Wind-up Study of 'Socialized Medicine'

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—The medical profession of Wisconsin within a few months will offer its answer to one of the most controversial questions of the day, whether or not state action is necessary to provide for every citizen adequate medical and hospital services.

In Wisconsin, particularly, "socialized medicine" has been debated vigorously during the last few years, reaching a climax last winter with the introduction in the state legislature by Socialist Assemblyman Andrew J. Biemiller of Milwaukee of a broad program which would have established a socialized medical and hospital system.

Representatives of the Wisconsin Medical society, offshoot of the American Medical association, which embraces practically all of the physicians and surgeons in the state, promptly attacked the Biemiller program and helped to defeat it.

Discard Eight Bills Biemiller had thrown into the legislative hopper eight comprehensive bills covering all phases of sickness care, and the prospect of a complete revolution of medical and hospital practice startled the organized doctors into a decision to look into their own field a little more closely, in order to present effective arguments to the next legislature, which they fully expect will again consider socialization of medicine.

The medical society voted an extensive investigation of the charges by Biemiller and others that there is a serious and growing inadequacy of medical services in the state, particularly in the remote rural sections and in the industrial populations of the larger cities. At the same time they would determine the efficacy of socialized medicine experiments in other parts of America and in the Old World.

To accomplish these purposes the society assessed each member $10 in order to finance extensive travel and research by two special committees and its secretary, J. G. Crownhart.

Beginning early last winter the committees held hearings over wide sections of the state, including the Fox river Valley in order to find out: facts on the availability and the caliber of the care of the sick; facts about the various cooperative edge of the Suez instead of the edge of an American forest. There were the usual number of men in white flannel trousers and dark coats. The usual number of women in new or not too new gowns. There were girls carefully waved, powdered, rouged, with vivid lips and finger nails. Girls whose slinky frocks clung like skin to their figures. There were demure little school ma'ams in comfortable cottons or prim, serviceable silks. There were cow girls and boys from neighboring dude ranches. There were stars and actresses from Hollywood. There were Swedes, Germans and French. There was a young Jap connected with the Embassy bent on enjoying America while seeing it.

The orchestra played a tango. Judith moved gracefully through it. She felt herself coming alive, as a wilted flower freshens after a brief summer shower. Just to dance again! It mattered not with whom. To feel young, free, untroubled. Yesterday, the day before, all the days—with their dull cold and searing heat, were forgotten. It was a fragrant September night. The music was good. She was not quite 23. She wanted this hour—just this hour to go on forever—

Arm in Arm Not until the last note of the last dance had been played did Judith think of going home.

"I actually forgot my children," Judith sighed repentantly. "I needed this night, Gary. I feel reborn—as though I'm about to start life all over and make a better job of it." She felt courageous, ready to meet and conquer anything. Was it only this morning she had been discouraged, defeated?

"We'll ride tomorrow, Judv. Tomorrow really."

and socialized systems in operation in several European countries; whether or not the insurance principle can successfully be applied to the payment of the costs of hospitalization; actuarial advice on hospital insurance.

To see medical cooperatives and hospital insurance systems in action in European countries, Secretary Crownhart went abroad early this year. In the meantime the society committees criss-crossed the state. Both are now winding up their studies, and will prepare their reports and recommendations for delivery before the annual convention of Wisconsin doctors next September in Milwaukee.

stood was a chair. She could not reach it. The floor rose and fell about her like an angry sea.

Gary pushed the chair close. "Sit down, Judith. In his heart he was cursing Judith's husband. "Oliver shouldn't frighten you so."

"No. Cruel to do that." Her breath was coming more evenly now. The world was steady. "He didn't mean to frighten me." She was trying to be fair—"I thought they were kidnapped."

"Shall I get the car and drive you to your plot or shall I bring Oliver here?"

"I'll go, Gary." Her submission angered him further.

"Mist" Oliver done took all the bags but one." Alf informed them.

As fear subsided, anger—primitive, savage—possessed Judith. Reuben had done this thing! Had dared to take her children—her children.

Park Wagons Off Road. Steidl Advises Farmers

Charles J. Steidl, captain of the county motorcycle traffic squad, today cautioned farmers against leaving their wagons or other farm machinery parked on roads while they work in fields. Equipment should be parked on the proper side of the road and as far off the thoroughfare as possible to avoid accidents, said Steidl.

He also warned farmer jumping arterials following a number of complaints that they have been disregarding them. Arres will be made of all persons caught disregarding the traffic signs, he said.

The age of the earth, in its present solidified form, is estimated to be 1,852,000,000 years.

Steel was prohibited in England for bridge construction as late as 1877.

Walking Almost As Dangerous as Riding in March

Fourteen Pedestrians Included in Month's Traffic Toll of 31 Fatalities

Walking was almost as dangerous as riding on Wisconsin's streets and highways last month, the state highway commission reports. Fourteen pedestrians were included in the March traffic toll of 31 fatalities.

Accidents involving pedestrians amounted to 102 in March, bringing the year's state total up to 306, an average of 100 per month. Out-gamie county had one accident last month involving a pedestrian, the commission reports.

The county's record for the year thus far compares favorably to that of the same period of last year, according to records being kept by the Post-Crescent. Up to yesterday there were 84 accidents since the first of the year as against 114 for the same period in 1937. There were 66 persons injured so far this year as compared to 67 up to April 25 last year. Since Jan. 1 there have been three traffic deaths as against 12 for the similar period last year.

Grade-Crossing Crashes Besides the 14 pedestrians killed in the state last month, six persons died in collisions between two or more cars, one in a car-and-truck crash, and one in a railway grade-crossing accident. Six persons met death in accidents where only one car was involved in each crash, while three persons were killed when cars smashed into bridges, posts and buildings. For the year, train-automobile crashes continued in second place behind pedestrian-car accidents for highest fatalities, yet there have been only 23 grade crossing smashes in 1938.

March was the fourth straight month in which Wisconsin had registered a decrease in fatalities over the corresponding month one year ago. State highway commission records show 51 fatalities for March of 1937. Of the 28 fatal accidents listed for last month, 11 were due to traffic law violations, four to hit-and-run driving, four to skids or blowouts, two to drunken drivers and one was the fault of a drunken pedestrian, the state highway department believes. Nineteen of the fatal accidents occurred at night, and not a single fatal accident in March was directly due to highway defects, reports show.

There were 676 serious accidents, 31 fatalities, 522 injuries, and 322 wrecks where property damage only resulted, March records indicate. While night driving was the most destructive of life, nearly half of the total March accidents took place between 2 and 8 p. m., in daylight and with clear weather.

JOURNEY OF BOTTLE Edgerton, Wis.—(A)—Mortimer Carrier, a high school junior, placed a note in a bottle and cast it into Saunders Creek near his home. Fifty-six days later he received a letter from Trinidad, off the coast of Venezuela, containing the note. The letter was sent by a passenger on the steamship Britannic. The bottle apparently entered the Rock river, then the Mississippi, the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic.
